No Dash to Europe? Good! A New, Long Word Tom Kupina's Blindness All 70, All Strong

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE STATEMENT THAT President Roosevelt, just before the end of the London conference, would "dash over in theatrical fashion, on a warship, is again denied, to the public satisfaction.

Woodrow Wilson did enough transatlantic "dashing" to last this country for some time. He was well received, had one of the best bedrooms in Buckingham Palace, the King and Queen even met him at the railroad station.

But that "dash to Europe" cost the people of the United States many men and ten thousand million dollars. That's too much to pay, even for a few nights' lodging in Buckingham Palace.

President Roosevelt's reputation for getting things done has spread to London. In the House of Commons yesterday a labor member, Josiah B. Wedgewood, told Neville Chamberlain to his face:

"The people of Britain would rather have Franklin D. Roosevelt as chancellor of the exchequer than Neville Chamberlain."

Cries of, "No! No! No!" from government benches were not convincing. A Conservative named Boothby sided with the labor member, saying:

"When Mr. Roosevelt said he was going to raise prices the world believed he would do it. And when Mr. Chamberlain said he hoped to raise prices, nobody believed that he would do so, by his policy."

By good work in America, President Roosevelt can get all the reputation he wants in London, without any "dash" to a meaningless conference.

A new, long word swims into your ken, to keep company with "relativity, erg, neutron, positron, quantum theory, Heisenberg principle of uncertainty, etc."

"COMPLEMENTARITY" is the new word, introduced by the learned Dane Neils Bohr, "godfather of the modern, complicated atom."

To some, this complementarity makes Einstein's relativity seem childishly simple. A lifetime consists of the "ponderables and imponderables." Things that can be weighed, and that can't be weighed, in the material and the mental world.

We lead a dual life and each half forever contradicts the other. Man's brain leads a kyli- and Hyde existence.

[illegible] contradicting dual- [illegible] come [illegible] go to [illegible] theory" and other [illegible] speculations. Meanwhile, "complementarity" is the word, and Samuel Johnson, who said, "Sir, we know the will is free, and there is an end of it," would have to say now:

"Sir, the will is free sometimes in our duality and sometimes it is not free."

At Sudbury, Ontario, Canadian courts and medical experts are puzzled by Tom Kupina, who thinks he is blind but is not blind, only hysteria alone interfering with his sight. His suit against an insurance company for total and irrevocable loss of sight of both eyes" is dismissed. His sight will come back suddenly when a bomb, caused by a mine explosion, passes off.

So much for Tom Kupina.

Many wise scientists tell you all about the universe, how its size and the amount of matter and energy in [illegible] d, [illegible] can sail all around it in a few hundred million light years, how it is destined to run down and end some day, perhaps only a few million billion years from now.

Those wise persons, unlike Mr. Kupina, think they see what they do not see.

Day before yesterday, eight men that had rowed on the Harvard crew in 1853, 80 years before, all rowed together and all were past 70 years of age, and their 1883 coxswain steered them. All of them are successful professional and business men.

This discourages the suggestion that collegiate rowing is bad for the heart and shortens life.

A university that teaches men to take care of themselves, live long, and return 50 years after graduation in good physical condition, is more valuable than one that merely teaches boys to win races or football games.

United States government agents raided a bootleg alcohol plant in New York yesterday, seized a truckload of alcohol. A group of hijackers appeared, took the truck and the alcohol away from the government agents, all within one block of a police station.

The hijackers, professional killers, presumably, took away the guns of the government men, and a little later sent them back politely, wrapped in a package. The government agents, evidently considerably confused, said that they could not tell whether there were four or twenty hijackers. Professionals usually beat amateurs.

AIMEE BEARS SON, SAYS CABLE

Hutton Brands Report a Hoax; Divorce Is Rumored

Los Angeles, June 24 (AP)—A mysterious cablegram reporting the birth of a nine-pound son to Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton in a Paris hospital was received last night by her husband, David Hutton, Jr. He branded the message as "ridiculous" as he or- [illegible] company to [illegible] and addressed to Ocean Park [illegible] and addressed to Burton at his wife's church, Angelus Temple, read:

"Darling boy. Nine-pound son. Doing splendidly. Understand press inquisitive, but keeping quiet."

The message was signed "Adoringly Wife."

CABLE CALLED HOAX

Temple officials, including Hutton's manager, Harry C. Brandon, and friends of the evangelist, said they considered the cable as a hoax.

"Somebody with a motive sent that," they said.

"My wife would have let me know about this long ago," Hutton said, "and besides I know that motherhood is impossible for her. There isn't a word of truth in it. It's ridiculous and I have ordered the telegraph company to trace the sender."

The cablegram arrived nearly 24

SHARKEY'S WIFE PUZZLED

Mrs. Jack Sharkey, wife of the heavyweight champion, was mystified today by news from Orangeburg, N. Y., that her husband, preparing there for his bout in New York Thursday with Primo Carnera, had suddenly broken training and started in a mad dash by auto for his home in Brookline upon receipt of word that one of his children was seriously ill. None of the three children are sick, Mrs. Sharkey revealed, in explaining she could not understand the sudden action of the champion. Sharkey was accompanied from Orangeburg by his manager, Johnny Buckley. Other Picture on Page 3

HARVARD MAN'S FATHER SUICIDE

Tragedy took the place of happiness for Bryant Buckingham who on Thursday graduated from Harvard College, when his father, Benjamin J. Buckingham, 64, of Highland pk., Ill, hurtled today to death from a fourth floor window in the Commander Hotel, Cambridge, in what police say was a suicide leap.

The elder Buckingham had journeyed to Cambridge with his wife to see his son graduate from Harvard.

Early this morning his broken body was found on a first-floor landing in front of the hotel. A doctor who was called pronounced him dead.

Meantime Mrs. Buckingham remained unaware of the death plunge. She was asleep in the bedroom from a window of which the elder Buckingham had jumped. Hotel attaches were the first to inform her and her son of the tragedy.

BLAMES 'BILL' FOR M'MATH KIDNAPING

Even Hints at Father as Case Nears the Jury's Hands

BY JAMES J. SMITH
Boston American Staff Correspondent

Barnstable, June 24—Cyril Buck was termed "just a sap" as [illegible] brother, Kenneth, called a tool of the mysterious [illegible] [illegible] in Barnstable [illegible] in an attempt to save the [illegible] accused of kidnaping [illegible] daughter Peggy" McMath and collecting $60,000 ransom.

Kenneth's attorney went even further at one point in his plea [illegible] calling Kenneth a tool of the real kidnapers. Turning directly toward District Attorney Crossley, he challenged him to prove that Neil McMath was not connected with the kidnaping of his daughter.

Peggy was kidnaped May 2 and returned May 5, after the ransom had been paid. The ransom money was found in the home of Kenneth Buck, who admitted he was the actual kidnaper.

Cyril was the contact man between Kenneth and Peggy's father, Neil C. McMath.

JUDGE TO WAIT FOR VERDICT

The case was due to go to the jury late today and Judge Hanify said he would remain in court until the jury had arrived at a verdict.

The stolid sons of the Cape in whose hands the fate of the Buck brothers was shortly to rest, gave no hint by their expressions what their verdict was likely to be.

For more than three hours they listened to attorneys build up a defense for the accused men only to hear Dist. Atty. Crossley attempt to shatter it with invective ridicule.

"I want you to convict both of these men, because by so doing you will be serving the ends of justice," Crossley pleaded at the end of a long and dramatic summary.

CROSSLEY SUMS UP

Willard Carleton, Cyril's attorney, was allowed half an hour to present his plea to the jury. Elias Burwick, counsel for Kenneth, who faces a possible 25-year prison

The Income Tax and Law Enforcement

CHARLES E. MITCHELL, former head of the National City Bank of New York, has been acquitted of the charge of income tax evasion.

As a matter of fact, juries do not CONVICT on charges of income tax evasion.

Income taxation is regarded by the average citizen as outrageous extortion and infamous interference with popular rights.

Evading the income tax law, therefore, is considered to be quite as legitimate a procedure as evading the prohibition law.

There is, in fact, very little difference in the character or in the evil effects or in the unpopularity of these two measures, or in the constant and condoned endeavor to evade them.

There is also very little difference in the widespread disrespect for law and for governments which these two mistaken measures have aroused throughout the whole body politic.

* * *

BOTH of these measures are extremely difficult to enforce, both are extremely expensive to operate, both call for an army of snoopers and sneakers, and arrogant and unfair investigators and enforcers.

Both are clogs on prosperity, a burden on legitimate business.

Both are at variance with the fundamental principle of liberty and equality which are the foundation stones of our republic.

Both encourage crookedness and crime, and both stimulate the discontent and dissatisfaction which express themselves in Bolshevist sentiments and activities.

Both are menaces to free government and should be abolished. Any political party desiring a winning issue has one at hand—opposition to the oppressive and offensive income tax.

The Democratic party came into power largely because of its pledge to repeal the unpopular prohibition law.

Another party can come into power by promising to abolish the income tax law.

* * *

THE two great wartime legislative mistakes of this country are prohibition and the income tax.

The two great opportunities for present day political success lie in opposition to these un-American measures.

Will the Republican party take advantage of the other?

CHAMPION IN MAD RUSH FROM HIS CAMP

Hoax or Plot? Fighter Slams the Doors on All Reporters

BULLETIN!

Accompanied by his manager, Johnny Buckley (he big fighter who had abruptly broken training on receipt of a mysterious telephone message, left for Boston at 9 o'clock.

Sharkey drove reporters all away from the house immediately, and went into the house through the garage accompanied by Buckley. He refused to comment on his rush here, thereby adding to the mystery about the whole situation.

At 2:23 the wall gates on the Stone ave. side of the house were thrown open by an employe and a few minutes later a machine driven by Sharkey with Buckley riding beside him shot into view.

Without slowing up to any extent Sharkey drove through the gates with roughly his car to a slithering halt in front of the garage. Leaping from the machine, the big champ said something in an undertone to the employe and then waving back newspapermen, dashed into the garage and through it into the house, after a brief command to Buckley to close the garage doors. The manager complied and followed the fighter into the house. Sharkey was plainly upset and in no mood to talk.

Racing against time at the wheel of a big automobile, Jack Sharkey, heavyweight boxing champion, at 1 o'clock today was more than halfway home on a dash from Orangeburg, N. Y., caused by a mysterious telephone message.

Making a brief stop in Stafford Springs, Ct., the fighter, who abruptly broke training for his bout with Primo Carnera to rush home, telephoned his wife and was assured the family were all in good health.

"I assured him," Mrs. Sharkey I quoted the Boston Evening American, "that the children were all right, but he said so long, as he had gone that far he would continue the trip. He said he expected to reach home inside of two hours.

"I am awaiting Jack's arrival now, and I shall probably return to Orangeburg, N. J., with him, tonight."

MOTOR CYCLE ESCORT

Driving one of the fastest cars on the roads, the former sailor was aided in his dash across country by traffic police who recognized him in each community through which he passed, in places where traffic was heavy Sharkey was furnished a motor cycle escort.

He was accompanied in his unexplained trip by his manager, Johnny Buckley, who received the telephone message which sent them shooting across country. The call was made direct to Gus Wilson's camp in Orangeburg where Sharkey was completing his train-

U. S. AID MEANS JOBS FOR 7000 IN STATE

$6,600,000 IS FOR PUBLIC PROJECTS

30-Hour Week, Hand Work to Be the Rule; Start Probable in July

Between 7000 and 8000 men will be given work for about a year on highway construction, as a result of the allotment of $6,600,000 to Massachusetts under the Federal public works act, it was learned today.

According to Arthur W. Dean, chief engineer of the Public Works Department, a 30-hour week will be adopted, with pre-determined wages, and as much work as possible will be done by hand.

Public Works Commr. Lyman has already submitted to Gov. Ely a list of highway and bridge projects for approval in order that immediate construction may be started.

WORK READY IN JULY

The allotment will be available July 1 and early approval of the projects will enable the work to be started within a few weeks. The selection of which projects will be started lies with Gov. Ely and his choice is subject to the approval of federal officials.

As soon as this approval is granted the projects can be started and employment given to thousands of jobless men. No convict labor can be used and as many unemployed men as possible are to be used. The contracts must specify minimum wage rates.

Commr. Lyman submitted his list of projects to Gov. Ely as soon as word of the allotment was received. He said he was ready to begin advertising for bids by next Saturday assuming the program is authorized by that time.

MAY USE ROAD FUND

The list of projects submitted embraces a cost far in excess of the federal grant. Gov. Ely, therefore, has a choice of decisions with the more acceptable and necessary construction work most likely of his approval.

Commr. Lyman pointed out that it was possible that funds of the highway department could be combined with the federal allotment, in the event the Legislature approved. Legislative approval is not required in the allocating of the federal grant. No disposition has yet been made by the Legislature of about $10,000,000 in expected highway revenue.

POLICE FEUD IS REVEALED BY GANG PROBE

Sensation Is Expected in the Report of Grand Jury

The Boston police department, rent by feuds and intrigues while gangsters and racketeers leered and grew fat on illicit enterprises, was the picture studied today by the Suffolk grand jury after hearing police testimony for the past three days.

And more than one superior officer today is uneasily wondering just how much the grand jury knows of certain transactions which hinted strongly of too close an alliance between police and lords of the underworld.

All these things, together with a report on 2000 felonies committed since the first of the year, the results of undercover police probes of their own department, and the club license racket, first exposed by the Boston Evening American, will be analyzed and judged, and a public report made on the grand jury's findings some time next week.

REPORT IN TWO DAYS

Not until a call for certain police records was handed about for four days did the jurors learn all they wanted to know, nor did they learn of much of the downtown police activity until they summoned a captain from retirement.

More than two days will be required to sift the maze of statements by witnesses, the arrangement of police records and the perusal of licensing activities, according to the more conservative estimates.

The evidence includes the questions and answers of Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson, former head of the Back Bay, South End and Brighton Divisions; Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis, confidential investigator for Police Commissioner Hultman; Deputy Supt. Martin H. King, "watchdog" of the department; Sergt. James V. Crowley, Gustin gang specialist, and Sergt. Frank Gilman, who was mysteriously moved from Back Bay vice and liquor duty.

As a final witness the jury also called from retirement Capt. Jeremiah J. Gallivan, who was referred to as "Honest Jerry" during his regime in command of the old Lagrange St. Station.

SENSATION DUE

It was on that division, the downtown night club area, that a beer license was refused by Capt. Gallivan and then was granted shortly after his transfer to a South Boston station forced retirement.

The nature of the grand jury report was not made public but it was expected today that the jury would deal with the matters in the form of a report and not indictments.

Regardless of the method in which the probe is finally handled and the number of recommendations the jury might make, close observers feel that, from the identity of the witnesses called, the report that will prove a sensation is to be the result of the probe.

Walker Finds Shaw 'Champ Knocker' of World Parley

James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, engaged by International News Service to report the World Economic Conference, today continues his description of the proceedings.

By JAMES J. "JIMMY" WALKER

(Copyright, 1933, by International News Service)

Geological Museum, London, June 24 (INS)—After listening to a chorus of amateur knockers of the World Economic Conference, I succeeded in catching up with the international hammer-throwing champion, Mr. George Bernard Shaw.

When the blasting becomes so general that it rocks the world it is time for the novices to give way to an expert—a man who by reputation like nothing or nobody at no time—one who has panned kings and peasants and made a good business of it.

James J. Walker

I was very anxious to meet Mr. Shaw, but went with the feeling that I'd find an old scold with a chronic grouch for everything in life but royalty statements. He was running true to form when he sarcastically said, "Yes, I'll receive Walker, but will he be on time?"

Now what do you suppose made him ask that?

Whatever it was I knew when I started my perilous approach I had to reckon not only with his reputation but with my own.

So the product of Greenwich Village, the pal of Broadway, the hardened son of Tammany, quaked in his shoes and begged his good little wife to come alone and protect him.

Well, we met and we kept meeting for an hour and I was completely disillusioned. Everything I expected in Mr. Shaw was absent and everything I didn't anticipate was present—none of the irritability, none of the impatience he is debited with.

He is so mild, softly spoken and even kindly that if it wasn't for his pure white comely whiskers I'd have thought we were visiting with a ringer. He was perfectly groomed and smartly dressed in a sport shirt I wouldn't have the nerve to try to get away with.

As I intended to say, what I wanted to know was what "mine host" thought of the world economic conference, and for a long while he discussed the subject calmly and constructively. When suddenly, it seemed to me, he realized he might lose his reputation for caustic cracks, without change of makeup he changed his attitude and finished off with this summation:

"Lot of Imbeciles," Says the "Lion"

"A lot of imbeciles who have ruined their own countries have gotten together to do as much for the world in general."

So in an hour's monologue I found out that while the convention didn't interest him very much privately, he was very explosive for publication.

Just a great showman. If he hadn't been such a brilliant writer he would have outrivalled Barnum as a circus producer. I said it was a monologue and that's just what it was, and I turned out to be just a wise-cracking listener. But after a great many years of curiosity I had the satisfaction and pleasure of meeting the great George Bernard Shaw.

I saw the lion in his den—a lion of good manners, chivalry, superlative hospitality; a den of comfort, exquisite taste, quiet luxury.

But the lion's reputation will never fool me again, and my adventures in search of the real George Bernard Shaw proved to me his growl is worse than his bite.

Shaw broke the ice by addressing himself to Mrs. Walker. He advised her:

"Don't you believe everything the reporters say about me."

I reminded Shaw he had labeled the World Economic Conference the "World Idiotic Conference," and expressed doubt Walker would believe he actually had said it.

SHAW—Of course he said it and meant it. You only have to look at the fact there is not an economist among the delegates to see it's an idiotic conference.

WALKER—That's about the situation. It's a conference to try to fit a lot of square pegs into round holes.

SHAW—They do things a lot better in Russia, which is culturally, normally and economically miles ahead of the rest of the world. The world should pay more attention to Russia. You reporters shouldn't worry about what Mr. Hull, Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Roosevelt are doing. Go interview Mr. Litvinoff (Soviet Foreign Commissar) and get the real information about things.

People Without Relatives Lucky

SHAW—This talk about raising price levels is all right for economists, but what is the unemployed man without money going to think of it when a statesman says: "You're going to be all right now; we're going to raise prices?"

WALKER—That reminds me of the story of the Irishman who couldn't pay his rent. The landlord went and saw him and said: "I'm going to raise your rent." The Irishman replied: "Thank God for that. I can't."

SHAW laughed loudly.

He turned to Mrs. Walker and asked her how she was enjoying London. She was obviously surprised when she told him she was born in England and planned to spend the weekend visiting relatives she had not seen for 23 years.

SHAW—(With utmost gallantry) —Then you left before you were born? But let me warn you, young lady, stay away from relatives. People without relatives ought to thank God for it.

The conversation reverted to Shaw's American visit.

WALKER—I was rather surprised to hear you visited America, because I remember reading you once said you'd never visit the United States while Tom Mooney was still in prison.

SHAW (wagging his beard vigorously)—I never said it. That's another example of misquotation. They badgered me all the time in America to go to see Mooney, to receive Mooney deputations and to make speeches in behalf of Mooney. I refused, because I am a foreigner and didn't want to interfere with American affairs, although people seemed to think I only had to command Mooney's release and it would be done.

WALKER—I can sympathize with you. I felt like a foreigner myself. I went from New York to California to intercede for Mooney at one time. Now I understand he'll soon be free. I hope my efforts had some effect.

At this juncture, we arose to leave.

AUSTRIAN NAZI CHIEF JAILED

Vienna, June 24 (AP)—The Austrian government answered the defiance of the Nazi party today by arresting the party leader, Alfred Frauenfeld, at Villach in Carinthia where, it was alleged, he planned to cross the border into Italy.

This action followed bombardment of the city of Linz by Nazi handbills dropped from airplanes and threatening a new fight on the regime of Chancellor Dollfuss, in which the Nazis would "employ whatever weapons they deemed necessary to achieve the goal."

PLEAD TO SAVE 2 BUCK BOYS

term, was allowed on hour. Following their pleas, District Attorney Crossley summed up the government's case.

"Cyril Buck tried to help McMath," the girl's father, said Carleton. "He did everything he could to bring about the safe return of the child. He refused to accept any of McMath's money. He knows nothing at all about 'Bill.' He was an entirely innocent party trying to do the right thing under the circumstances."

The "Bill" referred to was the mysterious "Bill," the bootlegger whom Kenneth testified was the man who engineered the kidnaping, using him as a tool.

DEFEND CYRIL'S ACTION

He pointed out that Cyril Buck, for 12 years had been living at Harwichport, and always "worked hard and minded his own business."

"Cyril Buck is not condemning McMath," said Carleton. "He was trying to help McMath, the girl's father. He knows his brother, Kenneth, was hooked up and he tried to help him. He knew nothing about the kidnaping and had no part in it."

Carleton said Cyril thought his brother was the agent of a gang and tried to help him and at the same time tried to help McMath.

"Cyril was a sap to get mixed up in it, a sap for ever leaving his garage," declared Carleton. "But he wanted to protect his brother and get the child back to her mother."

Carleton finished his summation in less than half an hour.

Elias Burwick, counsel for Kenneth, followed. He assailed the circumstances surrounding obtaining of the confession Kenneth made to Chief of Police Emulous Hall, in which Kenneth said he alone conceived and executed the crime.

"That wasn't the true story," said Burwick. "The true story was given here before you from the witness stand by Kenneth Buck. He told you he was only a tool, a tool of 'Bill,' the bootlegger."

IMPLICATES FATHER

While Kenneth sat beside his brother Cyril, his eyes filled with tears. Burwick quoted Brig.-Gen. Needham, head of the state police, regarding the kidnaping as saying:

"This case is a godsend to the state police."

"The gist from God," Burwick cried dramatically, with hands and eyes lifted, "Kenneth Buck riding in a train—to State prison."

Then quickly turning toward District Attorney Crossley he called out:

"Prove that McMath was not involved in the kidnap plans."

DENIES McMATH HINTS

Dist. Atty. Crossley plunged into his speech with fiery bitterness.

Answering the challenge of Attorney Burwick to prove McMath was not involved in the kidnaping, he said:

"If I found out that McMath or anybody else was involved in this thing, he would be here on trial if I could put him here. But I am convinced and the state police are convinced that he had nothing to do with it."

"Cyril Buck knew all about this thing from the start."

The prosecutor likened Kenneth to "a rat in a trap who will do anything to get out when caught in a corner."

He said the confession given to Chief Hall of Harwich was the true story of a "desperate man, and that later attempts of the defendant to discredit parts of the confession were due to his being in a corner."

SORRY FOR WIFE, SON

Crossley said he was sorry for the wife and son of Kenneth Buck but he pleaded with the jury not to allow sympathy to affect their decisions.

The prosecution dwelt for some time on the alleged complicity of Cyril in the crime.

"If he had gone to the police when he first learned of this thing, I would be praising him to the high heavens, but he didn't. He is as guilty as his brother."

The district attorney reviewed the evidence that had been presented against Cyril. He referred to Cyril as a "pretty clever fellow" who was older than Kenneth, and the latter's advisor.

Hutton wants to make his own living with as little connection with his wife as possible. His individuality as a husband was becoming submerged by the Temple and unfavorable publicity."

A few hours after Hutton announced severing connections with the Temple, Willedd Andrews, Temple attorney, refused to affirm or deny a report Mrs. Hutton intends to establish a legal residence in Paris by July 5 and sue Hutton for divorce.

He indicated that on July 3 Mrs. Hutton would have a "highly important announcement concerning the future of Angelus Temple and other matters" but he declined to augment his statement.

Mrs. Hutton has been touring Europe the last four months.

Zionist Leader Sees German Jews Homeless

New York, June 24—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Zionist leader, has predicted that 250,000 Jews in Germany will be homeless, destitute and starving within six months under the Hitler policy of anti-Semitism. He says that thousands of German Jews are seeking refuge in Palestine, where, however, only 30,000 persons a year may be admitted. He said:

"Tragic as it may be, the only things left for the Jews in Germany to do is wait and hope for an adjustment of the German conscience."

New York, June 24—For shoes, handbags and accessories bought by Mrs. Walker, a judgment of $3,323.29 has been entered in the Supreme court against former Mayor James J. Walker and his divorced wife, Janet Allan Walker, it was revealed today.

The bill was for purchases made by Mrs. Walker from November 1930 to March 1932 on which only $601 had been paid on account. The judgment was ordered after counsel for the claimants said efforts to serve the former mayor and his former wife in the suit had failed.

Fight Predicted on Tax Rate Bill

A sharp battle is scheduled in the Senate Monday when the report of the Ways and Means committee on the bill to help out local tax rates on real estate comes up for consideration. JUDGE REFUSES TO AIR $2,600,000 CARTER WILL BEFORE JURY

TEN COUSINS TO APPEAL HIS DECISION

Motion to Throw Case Out of Court Is Denied

Judge Arthur W. Dolan, in Suffolk probate court, today denied a motion to frame jury issues in the contest of the will of the late Nellie P. Carter, eccentric Boston millionairess who died last January at the Ritz-Carlton. Her huge estate was left to friends and employes.

Immediately after the decision was handed down, Atty. Robert T. Bushnell, counsel for 10 cousins who are contesting the will, stated that an appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court.

In denying the motion, Judge Dolan also denied a request for a ruling on the part of Arthur W. Wellman that the contestants have no legal standing to prosecute their motions for jury issues. Wellman, Boston attorney, is the chief beneficiary under the will, receiving a bequest of $560,000.

If the Supreme Court denies the appeal, the will's allowance or disallowance will be threshed out before a judge of the probate court.

Beneficiaries under the Carter will, who were charged with exerting undue influence on the 79-year-old spinster, were Wellman, who drew the will; his son, Sergent Wellman, who receives $150,000; Miss Mary MacFarlane, Wellman's secretary, $150,000; Lieut. James Trimble Brown, U. S. A., aide to Gen. Fox Conner of the 1st Corps Area, $100,000, and Joseph D. Leland, $200,000.

In addition to Wellman's personal bequest, it was charged that his relatives and office associates received cash bequests of $1,020,000, while Leland and his family were given $1,190,000. The 10 cousins contesting the will received only $5000 each.

'PAINTED SHIPS ON A PAINTED OCEAN'

Great white sails—more graceful than a gull's wing—moving slowly, silently, majestically across a blue horizon dabbed with powder puff clouds. That's a landsman's view of Frederick H. Prince's Weetamoe and Gerald B. Lambert's Vanitie. But there's more action and less poetry aboard the cup trial veterans. Vanitie, with her owner at the helm, has just stolen Weetamoe's wind. With that tactical advantage she was able to cross the finish line at Glen Cove, L. I., seven minutes ahead of the Harold S. Vanderbilt-piloted yacht.

ROOSEVELT MAY REACH CAMP BY NIGHT

President Far Ahead of Schedule; Denies Ocean Trip Tale

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT

Pulpit Harbor, Penobscot Bay, Me., June 24 (INS)—A change of some sort loomed today in President Roosevelt's plans for a slow vacation cruise up the New England coast in the schooner Amberjack II.

Whether by virtue of unusually favorable winds or premeditation on the part of the executive, he was far ahead of schedule. If he keeps up his sailing today as he has for the past several days, he will arrive at his destination, Campobello, his New Brunswick island summer home, tonight or tomorrow.

The unusual speed with which the President has whipped up the coast in recent days means either he will literally loaf the remaining distance to Campobello, a little more than a hundred miles, spend more time than he had anticipated at the camp, or start back to Washington earlier. His original schedule called for a one-day stay at Campobello and a start toward Washington aboard the navy's 10,000 ton cruiser Indianapolis next Saturday.

Rumors to the effect Mr. Roosevelt planned a dash to London to attend the world economic conference there were dissipated in an official statement issued by the President's secretary, Stephen T. Early.

"Recurring and widely published reports that the President will board the cruiser Indianapolis for a rush trip to London are without foundation in fact. The President plans to complete his vacation cruise and return to Washington as scheduled.

"At no time has the President considered going to London and he sees no reason whatsoever to do so now."

The statement went on to say that Mr. Roosevelt has kept in close touch with all developments at London, and that the reports of the last 36 hours, particularly, had been "altogether satisfactory." At least twice daily since he started North by water, from Marion, Mass., last Sunday, Early has gone aboard the presidential schooner to take his chief latest reports from Washington and abroad.

HOLLYWOOD LOSES A STAR

Because her foster-parents did not feel that she was ready for a career as another Greta Garbo, June Clark, 15, was on her way back to Needham from Elizabeth, N. J. But she really never had a chance.

3 BOSTON GOLD HUNTERS LAND PLANE IN N.F.

Party Will Fly On to Labrador in Quest of Rich Strike

Curling, N. F., June 24 (AP)—Three American gold prospectors, bound for the wilds of Labrador, arrived here today in the seaplane in which they left Boston, Mass., yesterday.

The men, Charles Hubbard, former Harvard College football captain; Edwin Goranson, instructor in geology at Harvard, and Louis D. Parker of Dover, Mass., were accompanied here by Francis Hartley, who plans to map a wide area in Newfoundland for the Princeton University geological survey.

They said today they expected to spend a week in surveying the Blomidon mountain district before flying to Labrador, where the three prospectors will be joined at Seven islands by Walter Averill of Bangor, Me., a veteran goldseeker, who has reported a strike 400 miles inland from the coast of Northern Labrador.

A group of St. John's, N. F., business men and Dr. Alexander Forbes of Milton, Mass., owner of the seaplane, are financing the expedition.

GIBSON DUBIOUS ABOUT DEBTS

New York, June 24 (AP)—Hugh S. Gibson, retiring United States ambassador to Belgium who has been appointed ambassador to Brazil, returned today on the liner President Roosevelt dubious as to the prospect of America receiving further war debt payments.

He said that "unofficial ambassadors," spreading good will in European capitals, had educated the war debtors to believe America does not look for payment.

The "unoffical ambassadors" Gibson described as prominent Americans traveling abroad without government portfolio. He said they "have been rash enough to say that we should cancel the debts."

"We can accept it with good grace," he said, as to his view of the hopelessness of further payments, "but there is no reason to rejoice about it."

The ambassador was more optimistic about the prospects for reduction of armament. He will proceed immediately to Washington.

3 AUTO THIEVES ON PROBATON

Freedom they took last night with a stolen police key was given to three South Boston automobile thieves by Judge Brown in Brighton court today when they were placed them on probation.

Thomas J. Kerrigan, 19, of Loring st.; Walter McMillan, 19, of East Fourth st., and George Slattery, 20, of East Eighth st., were arrested yesterday on a charge of unlawfully appropriating an automobile and the larceny of registration plates.

They later secured a key and freed themselves from cells in Brighton court. Kerrigan and Slattery were arrested ten minutes after their escape. McMillan gave himself up several hours later.

Today Judge Brown found them guilty, but placed them on probation for six months. Their escape was not mentioned in court.

Experience's School's Dear

Brockton, June 24—Mayor Horace Baker mixed his proverbs, to combine a rebuke and a warning to members of the police department who are guilty of misconduct, in a 15-day suspension notice he handed to Patrolman Einar Thompson today.

"To err is human," Baker's notice read, "but as a burnt child dreads the fire, I hope you will profit by your experience."

Thompson's experience was alleged to have been getting drunk while off duty in company of Gustave F. Nelson, a city councillor. Both wer earrested in Holbrook several days ago. Nelson was fined $25, but Thompson was found not guilty in court. He was found guilty by the mayor, however, at a hearing granted last Thursday.

Betrayed by her girlish voice and pretty face, the girl's intention to win a bathing beauty contest as a first step toward Hollywood, was blocked by the authorities.

June was all set to step into a contest at Atlantic City and carry away first prize. Under long trousers and a lumberman's jacket she wore a bright red bathing suit. The male habiliments were donned to make her passage to Atlantic City easier.

DOOMED KILLER TRIES SUICIDE

Chin Lee, 33, of Hudson st., Boston, under sentence to die in the electric chair the week of August 6, attempted to hang himself in his cell early today.

Lee had fashioned a rope out of a sheet, and fastened one end of it to a cell ventilator. He then kicked away a table on which he was standing.

Walter Higgins, night guard, heard the table overturn, and hurrying to the cell, found Lee strangling. He cut him down and removed him to the jail hospital where he was revived.

Three of the healthiest, happiest youngsters in al lthe world! Can you imagine a worried father dropping everything to run to their side? Yet that is exactly what Jack Sharkey is doing. After receiving a message, purportedly from his Brookline home, our heavyweight champion abandoned all preparations for his bout with Primo Carnera to hurry from his Orangeburg, N. Y., camp to Boston. But here his wife was at a loss to explain the situation. All of the children are well, she said— and this picture of them on their own backyard merry-go-round proves it. Mrs. Sharkey was about to leave for a visit to her husband's training camp when informed of his start for home. (Boston American Photo.)

EXCITING MELODRAMA ON SCREEN

Frank Borzage to Direct Star in "Man's Cattle"; Loretta Young Also in Cast

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 24—The hottest argument that ever struck Hollywood has been settled amicably. Spencer Tracy wanted to work in Frank Borzage's picture and Frank wanted Spencer for the lead in "Man's Cattle." But there were complications.

The two men on one certain night argued pro and con far into the morning. Spencer maintaining that if Frank had made the right effort there would have been no difficulty in borrowing him from Fox. Frank declared the one thing he wanted most in all the world was Spencer for his picture.

All this storm and strife was settled today when Winfield Sheehan agreed to lend the pride and pet of the Fox Co. to Columbia —or is it the Screen Guild?—for the Borzage number, which will also feature Loretta Young.

All of our glamorous stars at one time or another have done a little spying on the screen. Greta Garbo in "Mata Hari," Marlene Dietrich in "Morocco," and now Constance Bennett in an original story, written by Jane Murfin. Constance didn't like the script of "Free Lady," which she was supposed to do, and she didn't hesitate to say so.

Title Should Be Plural

"Dancing Lady" becomes more and more of a picture. Ted Healey and the famous stooges have checked in at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to add a few healthy laughs to Joan Crawford's picture. Franchot Tone is back in the cast.

"Don't blame Samuel Goldwyn if Anna Sten doesn't knock them cold in "Nana." He is giving her the best there is for her American film debut. Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, two of our most accomplished song writers, are writing two songs for her that will reflect the gaslit period of 1870 in Paris. Busby Berkeley, who is on the Goldwyn lot to direct the dances for Eddie Cantor's "Roman Scandals," is teaching Anna the can-can, the street dance of that period.

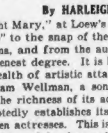
"Midnight Mary," Directed by William Wellman, Is Rich in Artistic Merit

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Midnight Mary," at Loew's State, is an action picture from the word "go" to the snap of the tape at the finish. It is exciting melodrama, and from the audience point of view, entertaining in the keenest degree. It is like a flowering shrub in a garden, in its wealth of artistic attack. Full blooming is the direction of William Wellman, a son of Brookline, you will recall. And out of the richness of its acting blossoms one name which here sure-footedly establishes itself as among the ablest of the younger screen actresses. This is Loretta Young. She and Wellman should get medals of some kind.

Thus, there are twain stars, director and principal actress. But they are not alone. One finds cast alike. You will marvel at this new Loretta Young. Heretofore, slowly building up through a multitude of of movies, likely as not just a "sweet young thing." Now suddenly bursting forth into efflorescence, a marvel of talent. Thanks he, wearing poor clothes as befits the hour, then magnificence in gorgeous attire. Not afraid to play down to her part, and high up to it. Gaining command of facial expression, she reveals an unsuspected power; and that voice of hers, modulate restrained, is something to admire. Always one of the pictorially supreme ladies of Hollywood, this young lady actress is now become just that—an actress!

Richard Cortez, Franchot Tone, Warren Hymer, Andy Clyde and Una Merkel keeping them good company. Crisply Wellman interweaves his speeding scenes; sharply, brilliantly, the characters live their parts. Wellman has a breath-taking pace at times, often he thrills with the cunning of his ideas, such as lapsing years told within the space of a few clicks of the clock, or the merging of sound or situation in successive sequences. Among straight photodrama, his is one of the most expert directorial contributions of this year.



Ricardo Cortez

For story, the career of a girl who began picking among the rubbish in the dump. Wellman, with swift stroke, introduces her in the courtroom, swings to the clerk's office, turns his lens upon the dated statute books, and in astonishing manner flashes back to gather the threads of the theme. The date is upon the law tome, and the book of life opens wide. Loretta and Una, with rare fidelity to young girlhood, the death of a mother, a term in the workhouse for a crime Loretta did not commit. Freedom, and introduction to the sordid underworld, where she becomes a tool for criminals. Impotent romance in a chance meeting with Tone, son of a judge, and thereafter a realistic panorama of lively incidents.

The narrative, of the kind so easily turned drab and heavy, is kept breathing, pulsing vibrantly by the skill of director and cast alike. You will marvel at this new Loretta Young. Heretofore, slowly building up through a multitude of of movies, likely as not just a "sweet young thing." Now suddenly bursting forth into efflorescence, a marvel of talent. Thanks he, wearing poor clothes as befits the hour, then magnificence in gorgeous attire. Not afraid to play down to her part, and high up to it. Gaining command of facial expression, she reveals an unsuspected power; and that voice of hers, modulate restrained, is something to admire. Always one of the pictorially supreme ladies of Hollywood, this young lady actress is now become just that—an actress!

Tone has his best chance, and makes the most of it. Cortez is just the man to hold portions of the film from the gangster brink. Humor exudes when Miss Merkel, Hymer and Clyde get busy. In every way, a brisk photoplay, is "Midnight Mary."

Joe Brown, too, that this is the first film of his wherein Mr. Wellman has not permitted his vigor to sag somewhere in or around the middle. There is no break in the action and strength here; he is at his best clear through.

In addition the State has superb "shorts" on screen, including a hilarious Theima-Zasu two-reeler; and on stage Salvy Cavicchio, xylophonist, and Sammy Liner, pianist, win applausive tributes.

Gayety Review

The Gayety, beginning tomorrow, and continuing below to remain through the entire week. The company is known as "Hollywood Nights," a all-Negro revue, with 30 stars, including the Musical Maniacs, String Beans Price, Ethel Cross, Lonnie Lyons, O. C. Collins, the baritone, Little Jimmy and the High Stepping Peaches.

Sylvia Sidney Shines Brightly in "Jennie Gerhardt" at Met

"Jennie Gerhardt," Dreiser story now being screened at the Metropolitan, is the theme of a lass who loved unwisely but well. It is beautifully produced and in general nicely acted. Sylvia Sidney is the outstanding figure, and at the start her exquisite performance is reminiscent of her best role in "Madame Butterfly." The picture in its sentiment may be likened to "Back Street," or one may hark back farther to "The Lummox" and its particular appeal is to adult audiences, with an emphasis on the feminine angle.

It is a joy to sit in at the Metropolitan, just ended a glorious week to mark the introduction of Edward Smith as manager. Now for his second he highlights an intelligent film, and on stage again goes in strong for names and talent. This paragraph merits the writing, for these seven days have been something of a high water mark.

Sylvia Sydney

Sylvia Sidney is among the new deal on prosperity for the Radio. It proves that folks will turn out in phalanxes when the program gives them what they want.

In the movie, Miss Sidney is a servant girl, befriended by a senator, no less, who later "does her wrong." From him she passes into the affections of Donald Cook, wealthy chap, who refuses to marry her when he learns the truth. But the relationship continues until an old sweetheart pops up, which gives Miss Sidney a chance to release her man. Her daughter grows up, only to fall victim to death. Then the man comes back to her, but too late—he, too, dies in her arms.

The cast may on the whole be termed efficient. Miss Sidney is impressive through the opening sequence, delightfully unsophisticated. It must be confessed she does not grow old convincingly; after the first quarter her best moment is at the death of the child. Here she touches the soul's depth.

Mary Astor is attractive as the woman who wins the wedding ring. Edward Arnold is fine as the senator.

On stage, one passes from womanhood cinematically made to suffer, to life and color, comedy, and song, and dance. The footlight fare is up to the high Met standard. Grand lady that she is of vaudeville, Irene Franklin reveals charm and ability with her singing. Other stars are Pops and Louis, Renoff & Renova, and the Harmonicas; white the Met's fixities are as usual superb.

Mr. Sevitzky triumphs as usual with his orchestra, and Mr. Martel officiates at the console.

For gofer interest, one must not forget Bobby Jones' appearance on screen in another of his series, this one being "Hip Action."

Flawless Acting by Film Cast

By HARRIS MORGAN

"When Ladies Meet," one of the best of the season's photodramas, is the screen feature at Loew's Orpheum, and the stage has a new bill of vaudeville of excellent quality. The picture is flawlessly acted, having such true stars as Ann Harding, Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy and Frank Morgan in the principal crossfire banter, clever quips and funny gags and bits of very acceptable singing, dancing and instrumentation, all of which were enthusiastically received.

Ann Harding

Peggy Taylor and Cary Leon, one of vaudeville's best-known dance teams, offer another high spot on the bill. These talented persons have a clever interpretive dance offering which they call "The Kitchen Pirates," which permits them to execute some of the most effective of numbers. Stuart Barrington and Eddie Flynn are in the company.

Other good acts include Herbert Faye and company in a nonsensical skit; Frank Donis in his pleasing comedy offering and Ernest Mack and Margie LaRue, who perform amazing feats on skates.

Mermaids Rush to Enter Big Boston American-Advertiser Swim Race Meet

Announcement of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser 19th annual swimming race meet for girls and women at Columbus Park Beach, South Boston, on Saturday afternoon, July 29, has been hailed with glee by New England mermaids.

They are looking forward with keen interest to the big splash, which, in former years took place in Charles River Basin. On account of the quiet conditions along the Basin this summer, the swimming editor considered it more fitting to have the races at the popular South Boston beach.

The beach is a short distance from Columbia station of the Dorchester-Cambridge rapid transit line, making it possible for spectators not using automobiles to easily reach the scene. Because of the wide expanse of beach, 25,000 to 30,000 spectators can be readily accommodated, without crowding.

ENTRIES PILING IN

Boston park department officials, headed by Chairman William P. Long, are giving the American and Advertiser whole-hearted co-operation in making the swim a success. They will provide sturdy lifeguards to patrol the course, marrons, and boats, rafts and other necessary equipment.

Entries for the American's big water carnival are piling in from all parts of New England. It will be a real honor for a girl to win any event as there will be stiff competition in every class.

Instructors, coaches and other officials of many New England swimming associations are co-operating with the American and Advertiser to make the carnival one long to be remembered.

Earl Spencer, director of Whitin Community Association of Whitinsville, who has brought out many girl champion swimmers, is planning to enter Miss Alice Bridges of his association. She is the national junior 100-yard champion and holds nearly all the free-style titles. Prior to participating in the dashes at this meet Miss Bridges will take part in the national championships in New York the middle of July.

CHAMPIONS TO RACE

Her twin sister, Marguerite, who is New England's 220-yard indoor champion, will also enter the American-Advertiser meet in the short distance contests.

Joe Yochim, coach of the Providence Boys' Club Auxiliary, Joe Watmough of the Olneyville Boys' Club Auxiliary and Bud Schultz of the Waspuck Boys' Club Auxiliary, all of Providence, are selecting their best swimmers to take part in the big swim.

Viola Field of the Women's Swimming Association of Brookline is co-operating to make the swim a success. It is expected several clever swimmers from her association will enter.

The McCarthy sisters of Dedham, Rita, former New England junior 50 champion, and Arline, a 12-year-old wonder who finished second in the 500 yard New England junior event last winter, will be among the entrants who plan to give a good account of themselves.

Geraldine Biesenbeek, New England junior indoor free style champion, and one of the best girl swimmers of the Peninsula district is another entrant whose prowess will have to be reckoned with.

Among the fair mermaids entered in the annual swimming races of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, to be held at the Columbus Park Beach, South Boston, July 29, is Miss Alice Bridges. Many records have been shattered by Miss Bridges in past performances and she hopes to take home the prize in some of the events on the program. Have you entered? See the news of the contest in this edition. Fill out the blank. Everybody is welcome. (Boston American Photo.)

What the World Needs Most

A wealth of old-time and favorite hymns will be featured by Pastor Brooks and his Old New England Choir Sunday evening at the 7:30 service, Dudley St. Baptist Church, Roxbury, Mass. Old fashioned costumes, an old-fashioned melodeon; old-fashioned lamps; old-fashioned tables and chairs will give a very beautiful and intriguing setting. The Ordinance of Believers' Baptism will also be administered. Special numbers will be given by Nelson Brandt trumpter. Pastor Brooks will sing, by request, "The Penitent's Plea," accompanied on the xylophone by Miss R. V. Bishop. He will preach upon the subject, "Get Right With God."

BRISBANE TO BROADCAST

Noted Newspaper Writer Starts Microphone Schedule Tomorrow Night

By N. F. T.

Listeners from coast to coast will welcome the concise and timely comment coming from Arthur Brisbane, celebrated writer for the press and conductor of the widely read "Today" column. Mr. Brisbane takes his first network turn tomorrow evening (WBZ) between 9 and 9:30 and is to be heard weekly henceforth.

Appearing with the famous journalist, Walter (Virginia Judge) Kelly contributes some of the striking droll Southern comedy for which he is endeared to the hearts of American theatergoers. Attending music during the half hour is being supplied by Al Goodman and his orchestra. Vocal bits by the Revellers Quartet are likewise featured.

* * *

Another highlight coming across tomorrow evening also over WBZ-WBZA waves, is the "Roosevelt at San Juan Hill" drama planned during the "Great Moments in History" program at 7:30.

* * *

THIS FAR—THAT AIR

Chauncey Parsons, tenor in the "Greater Minstrels" group aired on Monday nights (WBZ) boasts about once having been a floor-walker in Pittsburgh . . . Ray (Cuckoo) Knight is busy striving to get Century of Progress bosses at Chicago to have a "Cuckoo Day" at the big World's Fair—imagine! . . . When the Seth Parker "gathering" hits the air tomorrow night (WEEI) at 10:45, there will be 2000 men, women and children "gathered" in a park in Des Moines, Iowa, and singing selected hymns at Seth's direction, Boston's Jacques Renard is tickled pink over his new CBS program starting July 14, wherein his orchestra accompanies alternate Jane Frohman and Howard Marsh solos. There will be 46 cities hooked up and the sponsors make electric ice boxes.

LOCAL LATHER

Walter Smith plays "Home Sweet Home" as a cornet solo with his big band (WNAC) tomorrow night between 8 and 9 o'clock . . . Collegiate color marks the big Ruby Newman orchestra hour between 8 and 9 o'clock tomorrow night (WEEI) in recognition commencement time . . . Sam Curtis the radio-school professor extraordinary, says he has in mind to disagree with your Uncle N. F. T. tomorrow when he conducts his Sunday technical chat WEEI on the subject of static from 12:15 until 12:30 . . . O Kay Sam, the far from infallible "colyum" can take it and even promises to tune in Cheer three times and then some more for Emerson Gill and his Totem Pole ballroom orchestra, who are spending Sunday afternoon over at the Cambridge Home for the Aged, playing popular and classic tunes for those dear old folks who so thoroughly enjoy every thoughtful gesture made in their direction. Moreover, the same Emerson Gill hasn't told anyone about it either, which makes the whole idea even nicer.

Aircaster: Boston Maestro Comes Back

By AIRCASTER

New York: Since his caravan rested, many months ago, Jacques Renard, of the fancy fiddle and the facility of unusual orchestration, has been one of the lost souls of radio. Sponsors and radio executives alike had theorized that he had been so closely identified with the cigarette sellers who had made him one of the Musketeers with Morton Downey and Tony Wons, that much water would have to flow under the bridges before he could be brought back from oblivion, which is the limbo of the kilocycles. Evidently, a sufficient amount of time has elapsed, for Jacques Renard is coming back. For a time at least, his barnstorming days have ceased. He splashes serially into the air waves July 14 to advertise refrigerators.

The schedule calls for two broadcasts a week, via WABC. On Wednesdays at 10:30, Jane Froman will add vocal velocity to the program; on Fridays the tantelizing tenor of Howard Marsh will take the musical foreground.

At WJZ when the chimes blare the hour of 9 tonight, the booming basso of a gent who made good on the West Coast, and who is expected to excite the admiration of the East, will inaugurate a series of mainly melodic broadcasts. He is Phil Harris, who slew them, figuratively, in Los Angeles. He wafts his initial show from Galveston.

The Jack Pearl Thursday convulsion fades out, as previously stated, next week, and the fading leaves rather an aching void at WEAF.

The purveyers of gossip, however, rush forward with the report that the time will be taken by a tire company.

WALSH TO TALK WITH ELY ON PATRONAGE

Clinton, June 24—The long-awaited decision on federal appointments in this state, which has kept Massachusetts Democrats on edge for months, will come within the next two or three weeks, U. S. Senator David I Walsh announced today.

As most of them are Presidential appointees, nothing will be done until President Roosevelt completes his vacation.

At home for his first visit since Christmas, the senior senator declared the passage of emergency legislation in Congress has prevented a study of the qualifications and availability of the many applicants for federal plums.

PRINCIPAL PLUMS

These include U. S. marshal, U. S. district attorney, collector of internal revenue, Massachusetts division manager of the Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, public works administrator for Massachusetts and others.

"All newspaper articles about who might be selected are simply speculation," Senator Walsh said. "In the next few days I expect to consult my colleague, Senator Coolidge, with whom I am in complete harmony and cooperation, in the making of these appointments."

He added that he would confer also with Governor Ely, James Roosevelt and Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the Democratic state committee. The senator had several conference with Mayor Curley in Washington.

"NEW DEAL" ODDS FOR N. E.

Referring to the "new deal," the senator said:

"New England and Massachusetts in my opinion will be gainers and not losers under the new industrial set-up. Where funds are appropriated, we usually pay out more than we receive but I do not believe such is to be the result in this instance. High standards as employed by New England industry will be protected by the new system, not the low, cheap standards prevailing elsewhere."

PRINCELY RIGHTS GIVEN UP TO WED HER

The former Senorita Edelmira Sanpedro-Ocejo, beautiful daughter of a distinguished Cuban family, who became the bride this week of the Prince of the Asturias in Lausanne, Switzerland. The prince renounced his royal rights of possible succession to the Spanish throne to marry her as she is a commoner. Former King Alfonso and Queen Victoria have refused to bestow the parental blessing, having bitterly opposed the marriage. The bride is shown in her wedding gown of white satin, surmounted by a diadem of small mother of pearl leaves. (International News Photos.)

BANDIT GETS $600 PAYROLL

A lone gunman, nattily dressed and carrying two automatic pistols, entered the Benson Coal Co. office on Tremont st., Melrose, today, and, after forcing Miss Mabel Shilladay, the bookkeeper, in a back room, escaped in a brown sedan with the company's $600 payroll.

Miss Mabel Shilady, 26, was seated at her desk when the bandit entered. Holding both guns he commanded her to go into the rear room. When he closed the door she ran out into the office to a neighbor's home and phoned the police.

She described the bandit as being between 30 and 35 years old.

VETS RE-RATING STARTS SOON

Officials at the veterans bureau here were still waiting for instructions from Washington today on how to apply the new schedule of rates for compensation of disabled World War veterans in order to start the re-rating of some 10,000 service-connected cases in the State.

Attaches of the bureau, meanwhile, have been studying the new rates and declare that many veterans will benefit under the provisions of the new schedule. It was pointed out that the actual increase for many disabilities does not appear to be large, if the regulations are liberal it will be possible to restore reasonably just awards, lost under the economy measure to many veterans.

Briefly, it was said, higher ratings were given to disabilities connected with muscles and disabilities resulting from diseases were not treated so liberally. Serious disabilities, such as amputations of limbs are given a 15 per cent increase to 90 per cent disabled under the new schedule. Arthritis cases, however, dropped, severe from 50 to 40 per cent and moderate from 25 to 20 per cent.

C. C. Army Wars on Prairie Dog Town

Lincoln, Neb., June 24 (AP)—Nebraska's conservation army has declared war on a prairie dog "town" of a quarter million inhabitants.

The town, 16 miles northeast of Chadron, is the largest in Nebraska. Extending into South Dakota, it occupies 12,000 acres of land—much of which would grow good alfalfa if rid of the dogs.

Bearing pails of poison oats and stakes to mark the progress of their offensive, 25 recruits in the conservation army will start their campaign about the middle of next month now. The job will be done in about four months.

New Charges Face Broker Cummings

Lawrence, June 24—Complaints against Pierce F. Cummings, Jr., alleged bucket shop promoter, continued to pile up today as he remained in seclusion at the home of his father, 4 Allyn ter., under the care of a physician. He is said to have broken down under the strain of the charges.

According to Inspector Morrissey, customers of Cummings who are demanding an investigation with a view to court action are from prominent citizens to members of the police department.

DESTROYERS TO BE BUILT HERE

Work for hundreds of men at the Boston Navy Yard within a few months was officially assured today when Sec. of the Navy Swanson announced that funds were available for the completion in the yards here of two 1500-ton destroyers whose keels have already been laid.

Half of the 32 ships to be constructed will be built at navy yards and the other half at private ship yards.

At the Navy Yard it was announced today that it will be two or three months, however, before extra men will be required to complete work on the destroyers now under construction.

Chas. L. Wetherbee, Hotel Owner, Dies

Pittsfield, June 24 (AP)—Charles L. Wetherbee, 83, owner of the Hotels Buckingham and Gotham in New York city, died today at his Great Barrington summer home after a lingering illness. He entered the hotel business in Boston and later was proprietor of the Occidental hotel at San Francisco.

LYNN WOMAN SHOT, MAY DIE

Mrs. Alice Keenan, 29, wife of Patrolman Maurice Keenan, of the Lynn police department, was perhaps fatally wounded in their Summer st., Lynn, home early today when her husband's service revolver dropped to the floor and was discharged as she was putting it away.

She was rushed to Lynn Hospital and attaches there said little hope was held out for her recovery. The bullet pierced her body, entering just above the heart and coming out through her back. Her name has been placed on the danger list.

Patrolman Keenan went off duty at Lynn headquarters shortly after 2 a. m. today and went to his home. He removed his gun and placed it on a table in a front room in the house. He then undressed and went to bed.

His wife arose at about 3:30 a. m., according to the story she told at the hospital. She said she thought of the revolver on the table and decided to put it in a closet believing their two children, arising early, might see it and start to play with it.

She picked up the gun and was walking toward a closet when it slipped from her hand. Striking the floor the weapon was discharged and the bullet tore upward through her body. The shot aroused her husband who telephoned police headquarters for an ambulance, which rushed her to the hospital.

Woman Sees 3 Men Drown in 34 Hours on Raft

Frankfort, Mich., June 24 (AP)—Mrs. Charles Rennie, Jr., 27, who clung for 34 hours to the wreckage of an airplane that crashed into Lake Michigan Thursday and watched her husband and two other men slip to their deaths, was brought to Frankfort today, weak from exposure and on the verge of hysteria.

She had been picked up at 8 p. m., Friday, by the Ann Arbor car ferry, No. 7, which sighted her clinging to a raft fashioned from a cushion of the plane and a one-gallon gasoline can.

Mrs. Rennie told how first the mechanic of the plane, Peter Keller, 24, loosed his hold on the raft, then the pilot, James Goltte, 28, and finally her husband, Charles Rennie, Jr., 28, vice president of the Rennie Oil Co. of Traverse City, Mich., slipped to their deaths.

"He struck the water suddenly ,"said Mrs. Rennie. "The plane was damaged and sank almost immediately after we had struggled out and we could find only a cushion from the cabin and an empty gasoline tank. The men fashioned these into a raft and made me sit on this while they clung to its sides."

Keller, the mechanic, she said, let go his hold and sank about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

"We couldn't do anything to help him," she said. "It was horrible."

During the night, she said, Goltte lost his hold.

"We did not know it until he had sunk," she went on. "My husband stayed with me through the night, but early in the morning he told me he could not hang on much longer. He handed me his watch and some papers that were in his pocket. I was not able to hold him up and he sank."

NEW DEAL ENDS GRAFT—FARLEY

New York, June 24 (AP)—Postmaster-General James A. Farley expressed the hope today that "We have seen the last of the days when nearly everyone had the notion that whatever they could get away with legally was all right."

Farley was a speaker at the luncheon closing the National Catholic Alumni Federation.

"I think if there is any one reason why the people of this country have responded in the remarkable way they have to th. efforts at starting a new deal," he said, "it is because they realize that not only in conventions of this sort but in the very seat of our government itself the notion is spreading that sound business and sound morals are one and the same thing.

"There are a great many human activities which it is utterly impossible for laws to reach and cover. Moreover legislation is always slow in catching up to the latest efforts of human beings to evade responsibility and to grab the biggest share of power or profit for themselves."

SHARKEY'S TRIP HOME PUZZLE

At the camp it was stated Sharkey had received word that one of his three children was ill, but this was denied by Mrs. Sharkey, who added she thought "everything would be all right."

MYSTERY PHONE CALL

The telephone call to Orangeburg was reported to have been made from Lowell, but telephone officials there denied such a call had been put through.

To deepen the mystery William Pike, grandfather of Mrs. Sharkey, who with his wife is staying at the home of the "Cheerful Hillsquire," admitted he had talked with the champion, by phone, early today.

He told the Boston Evening American that Sharkey said he "might be home today." Asked if he knew of any reason for the unprecedented action of the boxer, Pike replied:

"He probably wants a change of scenery."

The three children, Dorothy, Marilyn and Jack, Jr., were seen by the American representative playing on the grounds of the Sharkey estate.

"None of the children are sick," said Mrs. Sharkey. "You know how excited Jack is over the children. I guess everything will be all right."

WIFE PUZZLED

She said she was at a loss to explain the mysterious telephone message, and later was reported to have gone out.

According to reports from Orangeburg Gus Wilson, owner of the camp, said a call came in from Lowell at 7 o'clock for Sharkey.

At first Wilson thought it a hoax to annoy the big fighter, who at the time was taking his morning run on the mountain road back of camp with Tony Palonzola and Al Lacey. He refused to give the operator the private telephone number at Sharkey's cottage in the orchard, far to the rear of the camp but finally was convinced by the operator that the message was genuine. Wilson called Johnny Buckley, who took the message.

Shortly before 9 o'clock Sharkey reached camp from his workout and announced he would put in an immediate call for his wife for whom he had planned to join him today.

"I'll tell her to get an early start so she can avoid the heavy week-end traffic," the ex-sailor remarked.

ROARS OUT OF CAMP

Before he could carry out his purpose Buckley, highly excited, rushed up to Sharkey and said something to him which brought waiting for a rubdown Sharkey changed his clothes and leaped to the wheel of his car in which Buckley was already sitting. As he roared out of camp Sharkey flung back word that if things turned out all right he would return tonight.

The big fighter, always excitable, and now under heavy nervous strain, is at a critical stage of his training for the title defense bout scheduled for Thursday night in New York city, and friends expressed the fear the break in training might have a serious effect on him.

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

WE HEAR THAT MARY CLEVELAND of Concord is very soon to join the ranks of the newly engaged and rumor hath it that the lucky man is not from Boston, nor a graduate of Harvard (why Mary?), though he bears a name well known around here . . . if so, it will be a case of last year's debutante becomes this year's bride, or failing a definite wedding date, this year's fiancee at least . . .

MARY CLEVELAND

And if we can believe what we hear (confidentially, we don't in this case) Charlie Stetson, one of Bowdoin, Maine's bravest bachelors (sometimes residing with his mother, Mrs. Stetson in Beacon st.), endowed with plenty of the world's goods, is casting amorous glances at a beautiful lady in Chestnut Hill and the tabbies are casting envious eyes over the back fences . . . it is simply extraordinary, you know, how little anyone seems to know about it . . .

Believe it or don't . . . "Swede" (Lewis D.) Parker of Noanet Farm, Charles River, is planning to join Charlie Hubbard on the gold-digging expedition to Labrador this summer, arriving 400 miles from anywhere by seaplane and staying until late in the fall . . . his charming young bride of a few months ago who was the beautiful Joanna Bird Shaw will remain at this end of the radio until he flies back to her . . . Some folks would have thought Joanne was a gold find enough in one lifetime . . . however, findings is not always keeping.

The Paul Shaws, who let their individuality be their guise, have recently purchased a beautiful large estate in the Newtons and will make it their winter residence . . . The cunning looking Betty Pope Shaw and her handsome husband are among the most devoted couples seen around and about . . . caught a glimpse of them at the races and very smart was she in her natty sport costume.

Wanderbird Sails Monday

THE WANDERBIRD WITH HER skipper, Warwick Thompkins, and a crowd of college youths shove off Monday for Europe and parts unknown . . . The E. N. O. will be aboard, which means that we will try and be as merry as the Jiggs family until he returns in September . . . but we know our Boston! Added to their list is the son of one of New York's multi-millionaires (sorry we cannot divulge the name but this species are getting shyer every season; some day they may entirely disappear); this should give the tabbies something to think about.

We see by the papers that the Cabots may still be speaking to God but the Lowells are hailing and exchanging compliments with the Al Smiths . . . Times are changing . . . for the better!

Mrs. Guy Murchie, 2d . . . you know, Queen Anne . . . has taken a house in Marion, Mass. for the season . . .

We doubt if we are alone in wondering is Alice Burrage's new job a real-honest-to-goodness-so-much-at-the-end-of-the-week fund, or just another time-killer . . . they tell us that she will decorate, personally, we mean, the Sarah Orn Jewett House (historical center) at Portsmouth, N. H., this summer with the help of brother 'Billy,' escorting the crowds of antiquities, or the crowds among the antiquities (it wasn't made quite clear to us) who throng to this well-known author's birthplace each season. Alice took high honors at the Junior League this election, being placed on the officer's list as secretary.

Will Assist at Festivals

MRS WILBAR GRANT IS ON HER toes again assisting the Peterborough Dramatic Festivals at Mariaden from July 4 to August 27 . . . the first offering will be "When Ladies Meet" by Rachel Crothers. Mrs. Grant is giving a large buffet supper before the performance for some of the stage celebrities and her many friends . . . at Dunhuntin, of which we wrote in this column a few weeks ago. She will be assisted by her brother, Mr. William Mayo, and her attractive daughter, Mrs. Philip Brown of Chestnut Hill.

Mrs. Winthrop Slade is in charge of the tea which will be served in the Congregational Parish House, next door to the town hall at Cohasset, where the Cohasset Flower Show is being held starting next Wednesday . . .

Mrs. Ralph Mennard is arranging for the lunch which will be served in the Unitarian Parish House on Thursday the second day of the show, under the auspices of the Unity Club.

Mrs. Joseph B. Ely, Mrs. Gaspar Bacon, Mrs. Larz Anerson, Mrs. William A. Gaston, Mrs. Adolph Leeds Mrs. Richard Saltonstall, Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, Mrs. William C. Prout, Mrs. George S. West, Mrs. Fritz Talbot, Mrs. Edward Ingraham and Miss Mary Curley are among the patronesses for the Garden Party that is being held in the estate of Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, today from 2 until 6 p. m. for the benefit of the Harriet Tubman House

Many interesting attractions such as a fashion show, fortune telling, bridge, art exhibit, Punch and Judy show, ponies and dancing are being arranged for the enjoyment of the guests by the general committee of which Miss Shiela O'Donovan Rossa is chairman.

Books--Many Other Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

Some of the best and some of the poorest of Hugh Walpole's short stories are gathered together to form the new volume entitled "All Souls' Night," (Doubleday, Doran).

Walpole can write a mystical, eerie, wonderful thing like "The Staircase," making you believe that the old Tudor manor house, and the staircase in particular, are living entities. Your flesh creeps and you shudder to your bed, fearful even of turning off the light. At the same time, you have been swept away by Walpole's art, the simplicity of his style. Later you turn to a ghost story like "The Snow," and you wonder of what early period—perhaps when he was writing of his cathedral town—he produced so ingenious a tale.

* * *

Turn then, in your disappointment, to "Spanish Dusk," and get a beautiful romantic story, full of color and warmth, with the hot sunshine dripping down over every paragraph. Here Walpole writes as only he can:

"Two days later we were in Granada. I had had in my journey there an hour of the Sierra Morena at sunset, and the burning color of that hour had brought me to the very edge of trembling anticipation . . . These colors—blood-red, purple, amber—lying over the sprawling grey hills like sheets of metal and yet alive so that you could feel the soul breathing beneath their covering, had in their intensity given me a new sense of light."

* * *

But go from there, as I did, to "Mrs. Lunt," and again see if you are not disappointed. Walpole gives you the proper setting a bleak Christmas spent by two lonely men on the Cornish coast, and with heavy snow falling and the sea roaring at the windows of the ancient ugly house. Your hope rise, particularly as you know this is to be a ghost story. The woman's figure at the door, and later in the park at twilight—it is all very deftly presented to you. But Lunt himself, in the flesh, simply does not come to life with his neurotic tendencies and fears. The ghost is more alive than he, with the smell of her grave clothes, her silent movements through the house.

I know of nothing more disappointing than a ghost story that doesn't quite come off. And surely "Seadrift Manshe," with its Pentadian implications, does not come off.

* * *

But "The Silver Mask" is a masterly story; and so is "The Whistler." There is a charming Jeremy and Hamlet story, "The Ruby Glass," and after reading it one wishes that Mr. Walpole could be induced to abandon his little vien of irgine to seare us in dark hallways and go back to the things he knows most about and of which he can write so engagingly and with such bubbling humor.

* * *

There are 16 stories in all in this volume—full measure and flowing over; but perhaps it would have been wiser for Mr. Walpole, astute critic, to nit half of them. Even so, he would have given us a generous book which, while adding nothing to his great reputation would certainly not have subtracted from it. He is happiest when he is deep in a long, leisurely novel and when he lets sleeping ghosts lie.

Collars Are the Vogue

By LAURA WHEELER

Collars are in style—dainty, frilly, ruffly ones—collars with bows—with jabots—tailored collars with simple embroidery. All help to make the Summer costume daintier and more flatteringly feminine.

The ruffled collar is adjustable to any neckline or size, and is attractive in a dainty material, permanent finish organdy being especially practical. It is very simple to make, and since its construction permits it to be laid out flat, it presents no laundering problem.

The collar has tie-ends which form the fashionable bow which is repeated on the cuffs. A dainty touch of embroidery can be added, as illustrated.

The second collar is tailored and has a jabot, as the vogue demands. It may be made plain or with embroidery, as illustrated.

The embroidery is very simple and is designed so that it can be made on an ordinary sewing machine or by hand in outline or running stitch. The cuffs repeat the embroidery.

New Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

AMONG the assembled crowd of fashionables at the Harvard-Yale baseball game were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frothingham. Mrs. Frothingham wore a charming brown and tan ensemble, her neat fitting tailored brown coat with a chatchy high collar reaching the line of her curly bobbed hair, was topped off by a tan hat of unique shape, jauntily tipped at a becoming angle.

Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw arrived in a tan and cherry ensemble. Her hat was tan summer tweed with a bandeau of cherry print and Eleanor Ives of Winchester, Mr. Karl Adams, Jr. of Boston, was Mr. Bradley's best man, and the ushers were Mr. Richard Borden of Fall River, Mr. K. Eliot Richardson of Brookline, Mr. David Howland of New Haven, Conn., and Mr. Erskine B. Wood of Portland, Oregon.

The bride's gown of flesh colored sheer had a lace train and a tulle veil fastened to her hair by bands of the dress material. Sweet pea babies breath and African daisies were combined in the bridal bouquet. The attendants were gowned alike in pink tulle cape dresses and pink hats trimmed in blue ribbon to match the blue of their old fashioned bouquets of ageratum.

The bride was graduated from Miss Winsor's school in 1930 and was presented during the following season. She is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club.

Mr. Bradley prepared at Milton Academy for Harvard from which he was graduated this month. His clubs are the Owl and Hasty Pudding.

Following the church ceremony the reception took place in the garden of the bride's parents at South Orleans.

Susan W. Locke Weds Today in Concord

In the lovely chapel at the Middlesex School in Concord, where her father is a master, the marriage of Miss Susan Ware Locke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Locke of Concord, to Mr. Albert Easton Senkler of St. Paul, Minnesota, took place late this afternoon, the Rev. Kenneth Gesner and the Rev. Richard Douglas Officiating.

The bride wore the same lovely white satin wedding gown worn by her two sisters, Mrs. John Follett (Sally Locke) of Tennessee and Mrs. John Driscoll (Helen Locke). She wore a veil which belongs in the Senkler family.

Miss Anne Faith Donaldson of Valleyhead, Concord, was maid of honor and two young cousins of the bride attended her as flower girls, Mary H. Cochran and Anne S. Davis, both of St. Paul, Minn. There were no bridesmaids. The maid of honor preceded the bride to the altar gowned in embroidered white organdie with hat to match and the flower girls in white organdie with blue sashes and white hats.

Dr. Wallace P. Ritchie of St. Paul, officiated as best man for Mr. Senkler and the ushers were Mr. John W. Nason of Swarthmore, Pa., Mr. David Sommers of New York, Mr. Robbins Miller of St. Paul and three brothers of the bride, Mr. Warren A. Locke, Mr. William D. Locke and Mr. Henry W. Locke of Concord.

The reception followed at LeBaron Briggs House at the Middlesex School.

For her going away costume the bride had chosen an embroidered blue and white dress and hat from Camilla in London. After July 15 she and Mr. Senkler will be at at home in St. Paul.

REMARKABLE TWIN CREAMS ARE ABLE TO GIVE RENEWED YOUTH TO AGING SKINS

Biochemical Creams Restore Vibrant Texture to Skins That Have Dulled

By Helen Follett

NEW SKINS for old! Aging skins restored to a bouyancy and youthfulness that one wouldn't think possible. But it is true. Science has at last discovered a way to concoct a cream which is neither herbal nor vegetable, but biochemical and as such is able to create new, healthy skin tissues.

When skins go "dead" it is because they are undernourished, starved. The blood stream is failing to give them the food that they need. That is where these twin creams come in. They supply the elements necessary to build new cells, quicken the blood stream, and rejuvenate the skin.

One cream is stronger than the other. The weaker one prepares the ground, so to speak. It can be applied at any time. It can even be used as a cleansing cream, and as such imparts new vigor to the skin. It should be left on about 15 minutes, or as long as possible, to do its work well.

The second cream is the night cream. It is the one that penetrates deeper into the skin layers and feeds more thoroughly. After the skin has been cleansed, stimulate it with a stimulant and then apply the night cream and leave it on all night if possible.

Whenever these creams have been used, there has been definite improvement in the skin. It grows firmer, more vital. The dullness, the tiredness, the relaxed muscles, the wrinkles—all seem to grow instantly discouraged and disappear.

For the name of these twin creams, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Helen Follett, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Girl Wants to Get Young Man Back

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man for three years and am deeply in love with him. He lives in a distant town and suddenly has ceased writing to me. The last time he came to visit me he seemed as devoted as ever, and planned on coming to see me again soon. I have heard from a reliable source that, because he has to take care of his old mother and father, he feels he can't give me the things to which I'm accustomed. I have a good position and would be willing to keep on working. I would like to do something to win him back. I know there is any other girl. Could you please give me some advice on how to see him again? I don't like to just throw myself at his feet.

B. C.

Dear B. C.: It's always a pleasure to hear from a girl who is so practical and wants to help along. You must also love. You wouldn't be throwing yourself at the young man's feet if you wrote him a nice letter, and said that you had missed seeing him, and were still looking forward to the promised visit.

The Marry-Go-Round; Love of Women

By HELEN ROWLAND

A WOMAN'S CHAGRIN at losing an expensive umbrella or an attractive husband, is always tempered by her relief at not having to keep her eyes on either of them, any longer.

Helen Rowland

* * *

A man's artful neutrality when he is trying to decide between two girls is like a woman's careful way of sticking a hand out at a car, each side of the car, until she decides which way she wants to turn.

* * *

A sensitive woman can work up a case of "mental cruelty" against her husband, if he merely so much as squints at her make-up or scrapes the burnt end off his toast.

* * *

If whole meals ever do come all put up in cans, no bachelor will feel sorry for himself—which looks pretty dark for marriage. Because, if you can't get a man feeling sorry for himself, how are you ever going to get him to the altar?

* *

Marriage and an artistic career are the oil and water that won't mix—and the career, like the oil, always comes out on top.

* * *

A philandering husband seems to be like a bed-sheet that is too short—just something that you can't do anything about.

* *

Jealousy is regarded as a very archaic emotion, now that a man starts right in by offering a girl merely a co-operative interest in his kisses, time and affection and a limited parking-time in his telephone list.

* * *

Love is the "homing instinct" of the heart—infatuation is the hunting instinct.

Too many mothers think of their sons as confirmed bachelors, instead of as some girl's future husband.

Sartorial Splendor

Among the many smart gowns to be observed at the recent May Ball were (top, left to right) Mrs. Roosevelt's simple white gown, whose only trimmings were clips shaped like field daisies at each shoulder; an elbow length white ermine dolman, squared off with military precision; and a gown of mahogany red chiffon, dotted with lame coins; and (bottom, left to right) white pique mess jacket, with enormous roses at the shoulders; white cotton lace and organdy dress, and long white coat of blistered silk.

How to Arrest Contagious Diseases

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

MODERN METHODS of quarantine and isolation have saved the world from the spread of many plagues and epidemics. They were common in the days when little was known about germs and the causes of disease. By means of quarantine and isolation series of diseases can be prevented from spreading to different parts of the country, or even the world.

Dr. Copeland

The word quarantine is often confused with isolation. When we speak of "quarantine" we refer to the detention of persons who may have been exposed to the germs of a disease but have not yet shown any signs of having the disease. The term comes from an Italian word, "quarantena," meaning forty. It dates back to ancient Venice, where it was customary to detain in the harbor for a period of forty days any ship having pestilence aboard.

By "isolation" is meant the separation of a person who actually has an infectious and contagious disease. He is kept from all well persons.

There are many different forms of quarantine, such as maritime quarantine, interstate, house and cattle quarantine.

Interstate quarantine is not as rigid as maritime quarantine. But special efforts are made to prevent persons having any of the diseases I have mentioned from traveling from state to state.

The isolation of contagious diseases is best accomplished at a hospital where special wards are available. Often this is not possible and the patient may be kept at home provided strict rules of isolation are enforced.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By Joan Clayton

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Unable to find employment, young and beautiful Patricia Warren capitalizes her card skill, at 50 cents an hour, by making a fourth at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, is fascinated by Patricia and impressed by her game. He offers to make her his secretary and partner, suggesting that she live at his home. Aware of Haverholt's unsavory reputation, Patricia hesitates to accept the position. Mrs. Warren, her stepmother, thinking of her own comfort, is furious at Pat's refusal.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"WHY YOU always quarrel with your bread and butter is beyond me," snapped her stepmother, once the door was closed.

"Mrs. Sycott was horrible," said Patricia, angrily flinging off her hat.

"Even if she has her little ways you might be more civil. Eileen Sycott introduces you to people."

"Only because she must if I'm to play bridge at the same table with them. I can assure you she doesn't do it from the goodness of her heart."

"She's given you lots of chances," insisted the exasperated stepmother. "If you had the brains you were born with you might get some rich man interested in you."

"At least I was spared that until last night," said Patricia. She regretted the remark almost instantly. But for once her stepmother seemed willing to let an old quarrel lie. She slit off a piece of thread and remarked casually, "Bill McGee called up while you were out."

Patricia looked dismayed. "I hope you told him I wouldn't see him," she said quickly.

Lillian Warren blazed to one of her sudden rages. She swung on the girl. "I told him no such thing. And you will see him, young lady, so long as you're living here. I'm not going to get in trouble with Bill McGee. I don't know when I might need his influence."

"His influence," echoed Patricia scornfully. "His influence is nothing but a gang of hoodlums who shake down little shopkeepers."

"He stands in with the police and don't you forget it!"

SPOKE SOFTLY

"I don't care who he stands in with. I hate him."

The doorbell rang sharply, imperatively. Patricia grew a little pale. Certainly Lillian Warren was pale.

"It's Bill," she whispered. As Patricia rose, she added, "Mind, now—you treat him decently."

Patricia opened the door. Bill McGee, a small time politician, a small-time thug, a neighborhood boy on the make, had adopted all the ways of the big time gangsters. He wore a flashily cut gray suit, an expensive camel's hair overcoat, spectacles in his handkerchief. His hard, black eyes softened as they rested on Patricia.

"Glad to see me, baby?" he asked.

"No," said the girl shortly. "I told you not to come here any more."

The man ignored that. He said softly, "I hear you had a run in last night with Julian Haverholt, the bridge shark. Do you want I should punch him in the jaw?"

"I want you to let me alone."

"You can" make me sore," said Bill, grinning. "I come by to ask you to go to a political dance with me on New Year's Eve. It's going to be a swell affair. How about it?"

"I won't go."

"Sure, she'll go," broke in Lillian Warren, her anxious, nervous eyes fastened on Bill McGee's slowly darkening face. "She'll be glad to go."

SICK AND WEARY

"I will not go!" cried Patricia, tense with indignation.

Bill McGee smiled. It was not a pleasant smile. He advanced his polished black head so that his eyes and Patricia's eyes were no more than two inches apart. His stocky figure almost blocked the doorway.

"You'll go, kid, and like it," he predicted grimly and, with that, was gone.

Patricia dismissed him f[illegible]ber mind. If Lillian Warren were frightened by the threatening attitudes of a neighborhood bad man, the girl was not. During the next two days she concentrated on the dreary business of hunting work. The days were long, tiring, utterly fruitless. Friday came. Until six o'clock Patricia tramped from one employment agency to another.

She reached home, literally sick with weariness. But after dinner she bathed, gave herself a manicure and washed her hair, hanging anxiously over the radiator until the last curling strand was dry. At eight o'clock she dressed in her careful best. She took a final glimpse at the bathroom mirror. Even to herself she looked unwontedly well. The green dress, old as it was, made her taller, slimmer, just as it emphasized the pallor of her skin and the red-gold glints in her hair. How glad she was that there had been time for a shampoo! Involuntarily Patricia smiled.

"Gee, you're pretty, Pat," breathed Teresa.

Patricia dropped a kiss on her small adorer's face and ran for the door. She was pervaded by a feeling of youthful high spirits and excitement. Although she had concealed it, secretly she exulted at the thought of meeting Clark Tracy. She had heard so much about the dashing young sportsman, had read so much about him. Once she had torn his picture from a rotogravure section and had carried it in her pocketbook until the paper wore through. For weeks she had dreamed the restless dreams of youth as she studied the photograph that even now was clear to her in every detail—a young man standing beside an auto trophy, a young man whose throat was bare and whose eyes squinted a little against the sun.

DRIZZLING RAIN

Outside it was drizzling. Patricia reached Eileen Sycott's apartment breathless, at the ball. A maid answered the door. As the girl entered the living room, a tall young man in evening clothes rose from an easy chair. He was alone. Patricia hesitated, light falling upon her hair, her eyes intent, almost searching, her lips slightly parted. To herself she seemed to be in a dream. To the young man—it was not that she recognized her from a photograph—she knew him; she believed that she had always known they were to meet in just this way. For a moment the two stood looking at each other. Something magical seemed to steal into the room; some magic seemed to hush the world, so that the traffic on the avenue below pulsed faintly, rythmically, like the surf on a quiet day.

The man spoke first.

"You must be our fourth," he said. And then quickly, not very steadily, "I—confess, I didn't think you'd be like this."

"And you're Clark Tracy," said the girl, at last, and in this house, careless for once of what Eileen Sycott might have said before the arrival, "I thought you'd be exactly like this."

Smart Gowns at Ball in New York

SOCIETY BALLS, the opera, charity bazaars and concerts are always important sartorially. The recent May Ball in New York, for the benefit of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's rest rooms for unemployed women, was no exception to that rule. The Seventh Regiment Armory, decorated in white and Eleanor blue in honor of the "First Lady," was crowded with fashionably dressed women. Some of the smarter things seen there are shown in the accompanying sketch.

There were many, many white gowns, other colors considerably in the minority. Lots and lots of organdy. Glittering stars in the hair, Alice-in-Wonderland bandeaux. Diamante embroidery. Chiffons. These last two were endorsed by Mrs. Roosevelt's ensemble.

When she entered the armory, formally opening the ball, we caught a glimpse of her flip-length coat with full three-quarter sleeves. This she removed before she entered her box. The gown was beautifully simple, no trimming other than clips shaped like field daisies at each shoulder.

White received further endorsement by three other society women in the same box. Dark materials were seen, too—some women consider their dark dresses their best. One looked lissome and willowy (everyone's fond hope) in mahogany red chiffon. A capelet fluttered behind.

A sleek, side-swiped coiffure, like that of the girl sketched in elbow length white ermine dolman, introduced a new hairline. A few curls were brushed upwards over the ears; the rest of her hair was kept straight and close to her head. The shoulders of her fur dolman were squared off with military precision.

THE DAILY TRUE STORY

One-Man Waffle Party

MRS. JEFFERSON J. JEFFERSON puckered her dry lips against the ruddy cheek of her husband at the local airport as she was about to enplane for a week-end visit with Aunt Heppie.

"Have a good time, Jeffy," she smiled. "I don't go very often, so make the most of it while I am away."

"I'll try," sobbed Jeff, squeezing a couple of small tears from behind his bifocals.

"The accordions are in the medicine cabinet in the bathroom," advised Mrs. Jeff, as she stepped into the cabin.

Jefferson tried to be sorry as the big transport plane elevated. There wasn't a chance. More tears just wouldn't run. His heart pounded. He had plans of his own. He just couldn't be sad. He was going to do just as he pleased again, now that he was alone. He was going to "kick over the traces," as they used to say when he was young. He would lead the carefree life of a bachelor. Ah, and then again! Long had he dreamed of a chance like this.

Who would expect that he, Jefferson J. Jefferson, senior member of the firm of Jefferson & Jefferson, had a maddening weakness for waffles?

NEVER BAD ENOUGH.

Never, in all his life, had he eaten his fill of waffles. Never could he get all of the waffles that he wanted. He had longed for waffles ever since Aunt Heppie had given them that electric waffle iron. Mrs. Jeff was very, very choice of this gift and had permitted its use only on rare occasions. She had frowned hard to use it much, because she feared that its bright polish might be marred or become dig. What would Mrs. Jeff say if she knew what he proposed to do, all by himself, that very evening?

With malice aforethought, he was about to throw a party, a one-man waffle-party. For once he would be a glutton. All of the waffles would be his waffles.

When he arrived at the apartment, it seemed strangely empty. It seemed bigger than ever before. There was room for him in the kitchenette. He could move with freedom in the dinette. The bathetis seemed enormous. He stepped into the sleepette. Just to see if he could, he dropped his handkerchief. It reminded him of his youth when he played the game. He stooped over. Yes, he could actually pick it up. There was room enough for that, with the wife gone. It certainly made a difference to have the wife away. There was more room in the little home. Jefferson used extreme care in taking out the waffle-iron. He admired it long and lovingly. What a shame to use it! Nevertheless, he was determined. He would not be denied. He must have his waffles.

He mixed the batter. He plugged in the iron. He waited.

Would it ever heat? Probably. Maybe not. It did seem as though it took a long time. He held his hand over the iron. He felt no heat. He touched it. It was cold. Oh yes, he remembered reading in some paper that they could be heated. Probably this one automatically shut off when the cover was lifted. He closed it. He waited some more. Yes, he could feel it getting warm. He touched it. OUCH! It was hot. He poured in a little batter. He closed the iron. He waited. He looked. Glory be! It worked. It was cooking. He touched the handle. He lifted it the cover. It puffed out.

Suddenly he thought of the syrup. He rushed to the kitchenette and got it. He rushed back. He lifted the cover. He burned his knuckle. Never mind. The waffle must be done. Its golden-brown looked most inviting. In a moment he would sink his teeth into it.

WAFFLE STUCK

He prepared to remove the waffle. A knife would do. He got one. He pried at an edge. The waffle stuck fast. He tried again. It did not budge. That was funny. Perhaps he did not have the hang of it. Maybe a fork would be better. Those humps in the tiny crumb did get in the way. Wasn't that aggravating? He tried another edge. He tried another fork. He tried another knife. How that waffle did stick! What was the matter with it? He never knew that waffles were such contrary things. He broke off a crumb. It was a tiny crumb. He tasted it. My, but was good!

Perhaps he ought to cook it more. He shut the cover. The waffle began to smoke. It must be burning. It must be done. He pried some more. He got another tiny crumb. He got the pickle work. He got the can opener. He tried a big spoon. A little spoon, a big knife, a little knife. Desperately he worked. Frantically he did so at the waffle. He got a hairpin. He got this and he got that.

The hours passed. Feverishly he tried. Worn and haggard, he pried at the tantalizing morsel. The more he tried, the more it stuck. It was of no use. With a pitiful cry, he slumped to the floor.

Jefferson J. Jefferson had fainted from hunger!

WHITNEY ENTRY PRESS 'CAP RACE CHOICE TODAY

"They're Off!" With the veteran starter, Jim Milton, supervising the springing of the barrier at Rockingham, six thoroughbreds galvanize into instant action, with six midget riders clinging like cockleburrs, each using every artifice to work into a favorable position—"break the nag on top," as they call it. Reading the quivering nostrils and straining heads from left to right, are Running Play, Chatting, Lone Hand, Dunair, Vested Power and Flagview. The three-year-olds turned on plenty of heat as they burned around the track. Vested Power led the pack to the wire, Flagview was in place position, while Running Play just lasted to finish in the money. Daily "handle" at the mutuel windows is growing to swell the coffers of state and nation under pari-mutuel betting. A record crowd of 30,000—visited the track for the day's racing program. Rockingham is outdrawing every track in the country at present.

Pity Poor Primo! Only 6 Eggs for Breakfast 14 Miles on Road ↑ Duffy Running Camp Looks for Victory ↓ Carnera in Shape

By JACK CONWAY

It is frightful the way Billy Duffy has cut down on Prima Carnera's groceries.

MR. BOSTON

"I don't allow Carnera to eat as much and as often as he wishes to," Duffy confided to me at Pompton Lake, N. J.

"What do you give the fellow for fuel?" I pressed.

"For breakfast," replied Bill, "I allow Primo half a grape fruit, half a dozen soft boiled eggs, four or five muffins and either tea or milk.

"I permit him to listen to the radio for lunch. No sense in allowing a fighter to eat before a stiff gym workout. Figure out what would happen to a lot of good groceries if one of the noble sparring partners should send a driving left hook to the breadbasket.

"When Carnera has finished his afternoon's workout, received a rubdown, dressed, posed with a million or so limelight seekers, given his personal views on" Mussolini, art, the drama and what not, I usher him into the dining room. He can then tackle a steak, three or four chops, a salad, baked potato and some tea. After that operation, I insist that Primo go to the post office, a mile from the camp, for the mail. I don't want the big fellow to get indigestion from sitting around after eating."

* * *

Duffy Believes Carnera Is Certain to Win

Duffy, with the possible exception of Carnera, is the most active person around the Pompton Lake camp. In addition to directing the business affairs of a contender for the heavyweight championship, he also has charge of the training routine and referees the training bouts. Duffy has a motive in refereeing. He is in a position to offer suggestions to Carnera and brush up on the big fellow's boxing.

Managers of boxers are usually enthusiastic about the chances of their men. Duffy I believe is even more enthusiastic over Carnera than the average run of pilots would be under the same conditions. In fact Duffy has always been hopeful in regard to every man he has managed. He has been looking for the rainbow even in dark days, and now feels he has found it.

"Carnera will positively lick Sharkey," said Duffy as his eyes lit up. "He is too big and powerful for any man in the world."

"What about the last time he fought Sharkey?" I pressed.

"He was only a boy then, inexperienced and without proper training," answered Duffy. "In that bout, he proved he had plenty of moxie and that he could take a belt on the chin and get up off the floor. That was a terrific left hook with which Sharkey dropped Carnera in the fourth round. In the 15th round, Sharkey landed some crashing right hand punches to the chin, but Primo had his sails up at the finish.

"Carnera has had 150 rounds of actual competition since his tussle with Sharkey. He has improved his boxing. His left hand is faster and straighter, while he is punching with crushing effect with his right. Carnera is most dangerous with his right when at close quarters.

"Carnera hasn't any nerves. This fight hasn't bothered him in the least. He will not burn himself out worrying about Sharkey. Primo thinks he can lick any man in the world, and I believe he is right."

Carnera Has Shattered Road Work Records

Carnera has shattered all kinds of records for doing road work.

"I believe in road work for a heavyweight," said Duffy. "Primo does about 14 miles of road work a day."

WINNING SOX DUEL TIGERS

(Special to Boston American.)

Detroit, Mich., June 24—The Boston Red Sox leave here for St. Louis after playing a fifth game with the Detroit Tigers at Navin Field this afternoon

And nobody will be any happier than Manager "Bucky" Harris, who has had to sit on the bench since Wednesday watching the visitors twist three knots in the tail of his Tiger

The surge of the Fenway flock has ceased to be funny. They took four in a row from the Yanks and followed up by breaking even with the A's. Then the rest of the league said

"More power to them. They need victories and can't get out of the cellar."

But now the Beaneaters are 2½ games above the basement, aren't too far behind the fifth-place Tigers and have won 10 of their last 14 games, clubs may as well prepare to become reconciled to the novelty of a Boston club being a contender for a money berth.

While the Sox are winning two of their first three starts here it appeared as though they lacked the pitching

In Friday's battle, though when they were pitted against Schoolboy Rowe and needed excellent twirling, they got it from Bob Weiland and won again, 3 to 2

Hole-in-One Tourney Draws Many Entries

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

The announcement of the Boston Evening American's 1933 hole-in-one tournament is only one day old yet the mailman is starting to complain already, for the first batch of entries was unusually heavy, here's a reason.

Starting on July 10 the Boston Evening American will conduct a hole-in-one contest. It will continue until every entrant has had a chance to play.

The scene of the tournament will be the same as a year ago—at Franklin Park.

Every contestant will be given five shots using any sort of a club desired. If anyone should shoot a hole-in-one he or she will get the first prize.

If no one gets an "ace" then the nearest to the cup in the final computation will get the first prize; second nearest the second prize and so fourth until all the prizes are awarded.

There are no catches to this tournament and the 1700 who entered a yead ago will be back plenty of their friends. There is no entrance fee.

Nobody under 18 years of age will be permitted to enter

An entry blank appears on this page. Fill it out and send it to the Golf Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. You'll find your starting time for your attempt at an ace in the Boston Evening American sports pages. Time preferences will be alloted as nearly as possible.

Watch the Boston Evening American daily for further developments.

BRITISH GOLF TITLE TO SCOTT

Hoylake, Eng., June 24 (AP)—The Hon. Michael Scott, 55-year-old internationalist and member of a prominent Scottish family, today captured the British amateur golf championship for the first time, defeating Thomas A. Bourn, 4 and 3 in the 36-hole final match

Scott was the conquerer of the last American challenger, George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, in the semi-finals. He has been the winner of golf championships in Australia and France over a period of 30 years but the nearest he had previously come to capturing the national title was in 1920, when he was semi-finalist.

Scott was never headed in the final after taking the first hole from Bourn, 30-year-old Englishman. The new champion was 5 up after the first 18 holes and this margin was sufficient to weather a rally by Bourn in the afternoon.

Scott succeeds John De Forest, 1932 titleholder, who was eliminated in his first match.

St. Moritz Club Wins

The St. Moritz Club of Quincy went into the lead of the Southeast horseshoe league by defeating Brockton, 19-17, at Quincy.

Record Crowd Jams Rockingham for Feature Race

By SAM COHEN

Rockingham Park, June 24—All attendance records for race meetings in New England, if not along the entir eAtlantic seaboard, were destined to go by the board as the vanguard of a crowd expected to total 30,000 by race time began to arrive here early today.

Rockingham Park, which has already outdrawn any track in the country for attendance during its first three days prepared to receive an overflow Saturday throng.

Five times the average 5,000 racegoers made a Saturday picnic excursion of this fourth day of racing at the New Hampshire track Cars streamed into the racegrounds while the horses were still breezing through their morning workouts.

WHOLE FAMILY THERE

Whole families from ma and pa down to babies in arms were here to watch the runners. The crowd exceeded the fondest expactation of the promoters.

The attendance indicated, for one thing, that the 28 day meeting would be patronized by more than those professionally or exclusively interested in the betting

While the pari-mutuel operators expected their greatest "handle" to date today, experienced track followers characterized the bulk of the crowd as "sightseers"—thousands just there to see what it was all about.

The runners faced the pro-pect of the fastest track to date, and the field in the seven races scheduled showed many new runners and hard-to-judge competition

The big stake race of the day fails to hold the spotlight for this afternoon's program, for every one of the seven races carded are clustered with a fine array of horseflesh.

Of course, the stake will have to be given first consideration for it is valued at $1200 and will once more bring together C. V. Whitney and William Zeigler, Jr., entries.

The Whitney entry, which has captured the major share of honors here, once more stands out in the big race, today's being The New York Press Handicap. This still holds true even in face of the probability that one of the Whitney entry, Redress, will not start for he won the stake event at the third day of the meeting yesterday

The other Whitney horse in the feature field, Cloche is good enough to win over the Zeigler entry, Cattail and Puchero, as well as Crack Flyer, another formidable opponent.

The $600 Concord purse, another feature event billed for three-year-olds and up over a distance of a mile and one-sixteenth, offers still another problem for the bettors who continue to storm the pari-mutuels' booths.

The Concord purse offers Standout, Banderlog, Brass Monkey and Tazewell as the star entrants, with the first named the horse to best and Banderlog the contender.

Bide A Wee and Even Up, who waged a merry battle on the opening day, only to be both outsmarted in the sprint to the wire by Tuffy G., will meet again in the sixth race, a mile event.

Even Up finished second in that race with Bide A Wee third, but the positions may be reversed this time without any horse in front of them, though.

As it was anticipated here early yesterday, the Whitney entry, Redress and Capsheaf finished one, two in the Salem Claiming Handicap yesterday afternoon, while our dark horse, Sobieha, galloped home third.

GRACE IS TO GO UNDER KNIFE

New York, June 24 (AP)—An operation virtually has been decided upon to relieve an infection in the left leg of Earl Grace, Pittsburgh Pirates catcher, said George Gibson, Pirate manager, today. It would mean the loss of Grace to the team for two or three weeks.

Grace injured the leg sliding to a base in Philadelphia about three weeks ago. It failed to heal properly and became infected two days ago, when the young catcher was taken to the hospital.

The [illegible] problem is solved by taking a Methuselite apartment and [illegible] advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

Joe Cronin has his Washington Senators at the head of the American League parade today for the first time this year. The boy pilot performed the feat by leading his charges to their third win in a row over the White Sox while the Yanks split a doubleheader with the Browns.

Nats Hammer Lyons

Continuing the heaviest attack the senior circuit has witnessed in years, the Solons pounded out 16 hits off Ted Lyons, White Sox ace, to win 7 to 3. Heinie Manish, hitting safely in his 26th game, had four hits including a home run.

With Babe Ruth hitting his 16th home, the Yanks took the opener from the Browns, 10 to 6. The Browns won the second, 5 to 4.

Old Eppa Peppa Rixey took his 42-year-old southpaw wing out of the camphor balls and hailed the streak of the league-leading Giants, as the Reds won, 2 to 1.

Phils Win 8th in Row

The second-place Cardinals, with a chance to gain a game on the Terrymen, lost their second in a row to the Phillies, 9 to 4. The Quakers came from behind to bang the famed Dizzy Dean for eight runs in the eighth to chalk up their sixth straight victory.

REVAMPS ELI VARSITY CREW

New Haven, Conn., June 24 (INS)—The Yale varsity crew was revamped today by Coach Ed Leader when trying out various combinations in preparation for the National Intercollegiate sprint regatta along Beach, Cal., next month.

Leader today moved Ed. Wilson to No. 6 and Johnny Jackson, who rows No. 6 in the Elis unsuccessful ace against Harvard at New London, to No. 4, replacing [illegible] Quarrier.

The crew is practicing on the Housatonic at Derby. The final seating for the western event has not been decided, Leader said.

SOCCER CUP GO TOMORROW

A well trained St. Pius soccer eleven of Lynn will go after the Clan McGregors of Quincy tomorrow afternoon at Lincoln Park in an effort to capture the Thomas Grieve cup.

The teams may play more than the regulation 90 minutes as the commission has ordered extra periods in the event of a tie.

The elevens will be meeting in a championship series for the third time this season as they met in the Mayor James M. Curley cup and the Boston & District league playoffs with the McGregors winning both.

LON MAY FIND BRAVES RUDE TEPEE HOSTS

By JOE CASHMAN

One of the four young men who carry the mound burden of the National League's all-star nine against the cream of the American Leaguers in the world's fair diamond classic will match his skill against Wally Berger, Braves' gift to the Chicago conflict, and the rear of the Tribesmen at the Wigwam this afternoon.

He's Lonnie Warneke, that long-lean Arkansas Traveler, and his efforts this Ladies' Day will be towards ending the Warriors' three-game win streak and evening up the current series by handing the champion Cubs to victory in the second tilt, starting at 2:15 p. m.

Will Harridge's prize pupils are going to gaze on flinging they'll never forget when Lonnie goes to the pease out in the Windy City. That's not a prophecy; it's a certainty. He's always that good.

WARNEKE CONSISTENT

Long Lonnie is a perfect stranger to off days. His record reads like a thesis on consistency. Last season he won 22 games and lost but six and his earned run average was a most stingy 2.37 per game, the lowest in the league.

This year, in this campaign, Lonnie has been outstanding. His earned run average with eight wins and six defeats, is lower with a fourth-place club than it was with the champions of a year back.

So it would seem that Bill McKechnie would have to find some able flinger if the Tribe is to have a chance of keeping its victory streak intact. Walter "Huck" Betts looks like the selection. He can, when on top form, be a real Scotchman when it comes to allowing markers.

Loafing yesterday cost the Warriors that tie for sixth place they gained by winning Thursday's opener from the Cubs. The Reds, with whom our heroes were deadlocked, handed the Giants a drubbing to gain undisputed possession of the berth.

McKECHNIE CONFIDENT

All of which doesn't worry McKechnie in the least. Bill isn't interested in sixth or fifth places. His goal is fourth or higher, and he is sanguine of attaining it before starting the second invasion of the West, two weeks hence.

The Tribal pilot has cause for his optimism. Sin's the shifting of Pinky Whitney to second, the placing of Dick Gyselman on third and the return of Buck Jordan and Al Spohrer to first and back of the bat, respectively, the Braves have been undefeated and have displayed all the signs of pennant contenders.

There's no apparent reason why they shouldn't keep on surging. The only weakness in the early stages of the race was lack of punch. Moore and Berger couldn't carry the burden alone and were receiving no help. The addition of the big bats of Whitney and Lee and the recent heavy hitting of Jordan and Spohrer has remedied the situation to such an extent that the Warriors now appear to be without a serious weakness.

The natives are only three games back of the Cubs and trail the third-place Pirates by but five games. They can catch their present rivals by winning today and taking both ends of the twin bill which will bring the engagement to a close tomorrow.

They may not do quite that well, but it wouldn't surprise us greatly to find them in a money berth when they start on their next trek to the distant places.

DON WRAPS UP DEGLANE WITH AID OF TOWEL

GEORGE KEEPS MAT CROWN IN GARDEN TILT

Don Pins Coin

Jack Conway's Magic Coin took it on the chin when Henri DeGlane went down to defeat before Ed Don George in their title bout.

The Magic Coin refuses to call for the towel, and will continue to try to call them right.

By JACK CONWAY

Ed Don George upset the predictions and retained his title as world's heavyweight wrestling champion by defeating Henri DeGlane in one of the most unusual endings of a major contest in the history of wrestling.

George won the first fall with a flying tackle in 20m 20s. The second fall was captured by DeGlane in 11m 5s. Freddy Moran, George's chief second, tossed a towel into the ring when DeGlane had the champion helpless from a hammerlock.

Then came the spectacular ending. DeGlane applied another hammerlock, and had George's left arm twisted around his neck. Freddy Moran stood in George's corner preparing to throw in the towel. An excited spectator, bathed from a ringside seat, seized the towel from Moran's hand and attempted to throw it into the ring. The towel floated in the air and landed on the top rope of the ring.

HENRI RELEASES DON

Referee Charley Donnell had been watching Moran, and knew that George's chief second had not thrown in the towel. DeGlane saw the towel land on the rope, and supposed it had been tossed in by Moran. He released the hold he had on George's left arm, turned his back on the champion and started to walk to his own corner.

George jumped up and cut loose with a fierce flying tackle. He hit the Frenchman from behind and dropped him to the canvas as if he had been shot. In a second he had him pinned. The time of the fall was 4m. 31s. Referee Donnell lifted George's right arm in the air as a token of victory.

The action was so rapid that many of the 15,000 fans who were in the Garden for the Boston Evening American Christmas Fund did not realize what had happened. Many of them thought DeGlane had succeeded in winning back his lost championship up to the time they saw the referee lift George's right hand.

George displayed excellent judgment all through the match. He proved that he has mastered himself. He did not leave many openings for DeGlane.

The breaks of the match, of course, were in Don's favor, but the champion usually get the breaks in all sports, because he forces them.

George nursed an injured left arm after the bout, but he was quite elated over his victory. It established him as a real wrestling king, despite the confusion that was caused by the towel tossed by the spectator. DeGlane should not have released his hold until he was declared the winner by the referee. He made the mistake of acting too quickly.

The rival wrestlers set a furious pace from the start. DeGlane surprised everybody by casting aside his usual cautious system of wrestling and taking desperate chances.

George refused to give an inch of ground to the Frenchman. He was dropped repeatedly by the Nantes lad, but got off the floor to injure the Frenchman with vicious tackles.

DeGlane used head locks, and also clubbed George down with his closed hands. He struck at the base of George's brain. The blow was similar to the rabbit punch which is barred in the boxing game.

GEORGE GETS ROUGH

George decided to rough things up as the Frenchman had the edge on straight wrestling. He surprised Henri with three vicious tackles. Before the Frenchman could get his bearings another tackle sent him crashing to the canvas and Don pinned him for the first fall of the match in 20m 20s.

When the big fellows returned to the mat, the fast milling was resumed. DeGlane continued to have the better of things at close range wrestling. He dropped George with arm locks and also punished him with head locks. George missed several wild tackles. This caused him to reduce the distance of his tackles. He was more successful at this style of warfare.

DeGlane continued to play for arm locks. Henri clamped a hammerlock on Don's left arm. He wrapped the arm around George's neck. When it looked as if George's shoulder would break, Freddy Moran, George's chief second, tossed a towel into the ring. George was in poor condition after losing the fall, and was granted a five-minute extra rest period.

Then followed the stirring ending described above.

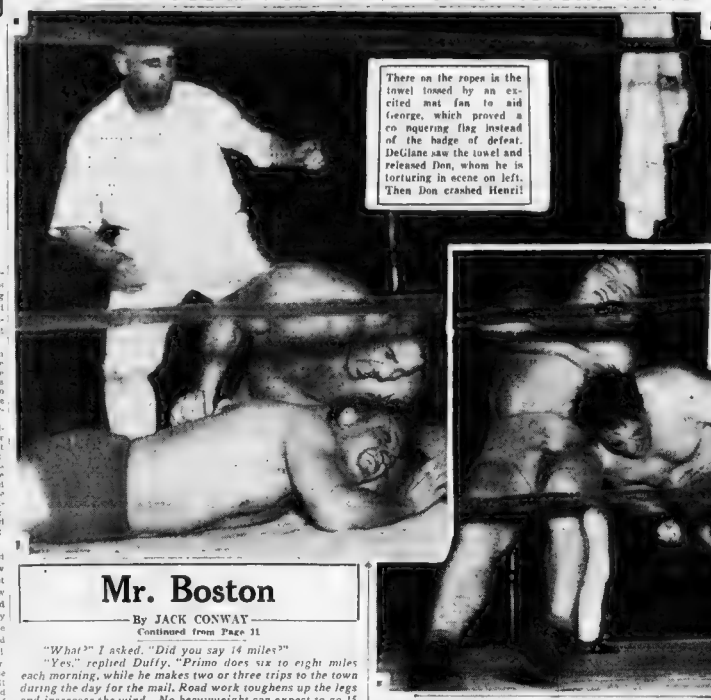
TOWEL TOSSED FOR DON, PROVES VICTORY FLAG



There on the ropes in the towel tossed by an excited mat fan to aid George, which proved a conquering flag instead of the badge of defeat. DeGlane saw the towel and released Don, whom he is torturing in scene on left. Then Don crashed Henri!

"What?" I asked. "Did you say 14 miles?"

"Yes," replied Duffy. "Primo does six to eight miles each morning, while he makes two or three trips to the town during the day for the mail. Road work toughens up the legs and increases the wind. No heavyweight can expect to go 15 rounds unless he does road work."

VINES TO BE PRO WITH TILDEN?

New York, June 24 (AP) The World-Telegram says Ellsworth Vines, Jr., has reached a tentative agreement with Big Bill Tilden to turn professional after the National Tennis championships and that he will receive $100,000 for a tour with Tilden.

The paper gives as its authority Bill O'Brien, who is described as agent for Big Bill. Tilden and Vines both are in Europe.

Tilden allegedly offered Vines $20,000 to turn professional last fall after his victory over Henry Cochet in the Nationals but the offer was refused.

According to O'Brien, Tilden and Vines would open their tour in New York next January and play all the big cities enroute to the coast.

Tilden and Karl Kozelub, in their barnstorming trip two years ago, are supposed to have grossed over $200,000 and Tilden and Vines, O'Brien believes, would pull twice that amount through the box office windows.

LUTZE DRAWS WITH SAVOLDI

Jumping Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star, and Nat. Lutze of California, went 30 minutes to a draw in a stirring semi-final to the George-DeGlane title battle at the Christmas Basket Fund a show at the Boston Garden.

Savoldi made six desperate attempts to wreck Lutze with his famous Notre Dame drop kick. Each time his feet crashed against Lutze's chest and sent the Californian to the canvas Lutze turned his body to avoid being pinned.

JOE, NICK THRILL FANS

Savoldi proved he can execute the flying tackle with the best in them. He rocked Lutze with some driving tackles.

Lutze had much the better of the straight wrestling. He was one of the fastest mat bouts ever held in this city and had the stage crowd in an uproar.

Panther Joe Malcewicz knocked over 300-pound Man Mountain Dean in 8m. 52s. with a reverse back fall.

Earl McCready of Oklahoma furnished the fans with a thrill when he spilled Gentleman Jack Washburn with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam in 11m. 19s.

STRAIGHT VICTOR

Charley Strack disposed of John Friberg in 10m. 47s. with a hip lock and arm lock combination.

Count Zarynoff and Charley Hanson went 10m. to a draw.

John Spellman and Jim Clinkstock were also 50-50 at the end of 10m. of grappling.

Leo Macaluso won from Sailor Arnold in 6m. 14s., using a flying tackle and inside chancery.

Bibber McCoy and Red Krogh went 5m. to a draw, while Buck Weaver and Rudy Ladlizi were also on even terms at the end of 5m of grappling.

Primo Down Fine; Jack at Peak

New York, June 24 (AP)—Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera enter the last stages of training today for their 15-round heavyweight championship bout in Madison Square Garden's Long Island City Bowl next Thursday night.

Down to 206 pounds and in excellent shape, Sharkey plans to box six rounds daily.

The mammoth Italian, fearing staleness, expects to go through only two more boxing workouts, today and tomorrow, and then will take only the lightest sort of exercise until the night of the bout. Primo scales 262 pounds now, three pounds under his best fighting weight.

Both Sharkey and his challenger, together with their managers and trainers, visited the state athletic commission offices yesterday to examine the gloves which the principals will use. Carnera will be permitted to wear 7-ounce gloves one ounce heavier than regulation 8-ounce gloves Sharkey will use.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Slattery 3½, Filene 2½.
Henry 4½, Jordan 1½.
Shepard 5, Conrad 0.
Gilchrist 3, Sears Roebuck 3.

Although the contenders for the Mitton Cup are a trifle more closely bunched, there was no radical change today in the standing of the Retail Stores Golf League after the matches at the Kernwood Country Club.

The C. F. Hovey Co. was the big winner of the day. Playing against Jordan Marsh, Hovey's picked up 4½ points, which was a net gain of two points on Filene's and moved them into a point and one-half nearer to Shepard.

Carter Hoyt and Ed Lindskog nicked Warren Carey and Jim Pierre for two and one half points. Joe Howe and John Roche, the most consistent winners in the organization, took Roy Dodge and Bob Gately for two points.

With two matches to play, Filene's is out in front by a margin of a half point over Shepard, with Hovey in third place, but the other teams have one more match listed than the three leaders, which puts a different complexion on the race.

The E. T. Slattery Co. turned the tables on Filene's, winning 3½ to 2½. Edmund O'Connell and Art Huguley took two points to conquer George Saxe and H. D. Hodgkinson but the latter won a point to save Filene's from dropping into second place, and prevent Slattery's from stepping over Conrad's.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Although the Retail Stores Golf League four ball teams have engaged in six matches, the competition is so keen that there are only 15 points difference between the Wm. Filene's Sons Co., the leaders and the seventh place Sears, Roebuck team. Filene's, as well as the Shepard Stores and the C. F. Hovey Co., have played one more than the other teams.

Edmund O'Connell, Slattery came up with a birdie three at the 7th hole at Kernwood. In fact, O'Connell was at the peak of his game, racing to the turn in 41 which is some golf from the back tees and in a heavy wind at Kernwood. Art Huguley, his partner, was one stroke better and they had a better ball of 37, which was two fast a pace for Capt. George Saxe and H. D. Hodgkinson Filene's.

Black Ace Putter

Ben Black, Shepard, had another one of his good days on the green.

During the first nine Ben won putts and allowances and had Walter Wagner and Dick Earls, Conrad staggering.

Although Dave Mooney, Conrad lad a bet on his medal round, he and his partner, Lon Ehrlich, had the keen satisfaction of taking three points from John Shepard and Ed Kirby.

Joe Howe and John Roche, Hovey's, added two more points to their grand total at the expense of Roy Dodge and Bob Gateley. Jordan Marsh. In six matches, Howe and Roche have corraled 15½ points for Hovey's.

From the way that Bill Nugent, Jr., and Henry Bradford, Sears Roebuck, have been going of late, they are just about as capable as any pair in the league to beat. Nugent was out in 39 yesterday and his partner came in on the home nine against Frank Vorenberg and Maurice Clarke. Vorenberg was 38 on his own ball for the first nine but he was two down.

Williams Flashes

Chauncey S. Williams, Sears Roebuck, came up with a fine three at the short 12th. He was also and in the deep rough from the tee and his approach was almost 150 feet away from the cup, but he stepped up and tapped home the putt for a three and a win.

The Schaschke-Balmayne team, representing Gilchrist, is a tough combination. Balmayne, who cadeted at Belmont Spring back in the days of Oren Terry, is a terrific hitter. Schaschke has no poor in the league chipping and putting.

The seventh matches of the Retail Stores Golf League will be played at the Tedesco Country Club next Friday. The teams were anxious to play Blue Hill next week but because of a Rotarian tournament they could not be accommodated.

ROSLINDALE'S STEADY PLAY TWI FEATURE

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Baseball Neponset and St. Augustines in the East Division of the City League may have more color, but when it comes to steady, first division, day in and day out ball playing, the fans stick by Roslindale, leader from out of the West. Under Teddy Donavan, the Roslindales are playing the steadiest ball on the sandlots.

Donavan has a well rounds pitching staff with Chet Fullerton, Walsh and Jim Shea and about the best infield in the league. Smeltzer is playing a strong game at second base in place of Andy Spongardi, who has gone to Reading. Donavan at first, Holy Cross Johnny Marshall at short and Andy Daley at third, make up as strong an inner cordon as any manager could want.

Playoff Fight On

The battle for the playoff berth in the Twilight League between the Sheridans of Watertown and Malden will be continued this afternoon when the teams meet at Victory Field. The C. M. A. C's of Lowell and Waltham have made the playoffs. This afternoon's game practically will decide whether Maldens or Sheridans make the grade.

Frank Gentile and Johnny Corso, each hitting at a .500 clip, greatly helped the Pardy Club forge to the front in the junior circuit of the Intersuburban League. The club also was strengthened by the addition of Jimmy Hennessey.

Speaking of the Pardy's, they boast they have the best outfield in the league, in McCormack, Perron and Ruckton, with Boudreau in reserve.

Although bringing up the rear in their division of the City Club, the St. Alphonsus Club has the loyal support of all the Penn fans. Eddie Wall, the English high star, is playing a great game at third.

Whispering Bill Barrett, Red Buchanan and Sullivan are holding Roslindale up in the outfield. Tom Gherre is doing splendidly behind the bat and wields a wicked bludgeon besides.

Newton Y Aces Click

Tom Bagley Pete Morrison, "Ace" Bagley, Jim Doherty, McLean, Conway and Shaughnessy are delivering the right brand of baseball goods for the Newton Y. M. C. A.

Greg "Speed" Keefe and "Tee" Clasby, are two of the best all round ball players in local parts. Each has played several positions for the St. Thomas Club of the City League, but are best suited to the diamond and they make good.

HERE'S CHANCE FOR BACKWARD SKATERS

Can you skate backward?

If so, you may win a prize at the roller skating derby of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser in Boston Arena July 22.

Many persons of all ages can do all kinds of stunts on roller skates and as the Boston Evening American is endeavoring to make the derby as entertaining as possible it has decided to stage a backward skating contest to the program. This event should result in a lot of fun, including many spills.

Francis Driscoll, 14, of 69 Bower st., Roxbury, will be one of the first to enter the backward skating contest. Does he think he's good? Here is what he wrote the skating editor:

"I'm a shark at skating backward. Inform me if there is a contest of this kind."

Well, Francis, here's the information officially. Many other young skaters are wondering whether the Boston Evening American would add such an event will be pleased to learn that it will.

Entries for the derby continue to pour in. They come from every section of Greater Boston and from persons of all ages.

MANY IN PRACTICE

Many persons presented themselves for practice, being permitted to skate from 9 a. m. until noon for ten cents, with free use of skates through courtesy of Manager George C. Brown. And were those skaters enthusiastic over this big rink with its 20,000 square feet of skating space!

More than 100 persons, mostly boys, availed themselves yesterday of Mr. Brown's offer to practice in the Arena. He will permit prospective contestants to skate there next Monday and Friday afternoons from 2 to 5 o'clock and on Saturday morning from 9 to 12 o'clock for the nominal sum of 10 cents, which includes use of Arena skates.

Skaters living in the vicinity of Revere may skate at the Rollaway Rink, 867 Ocean st., Lynn, and back of State Bath Houses any afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock for ten cents, though on Saturdays Alex MacLean, its owner, who is co-operating with the American and Advertiser,

Another treat has been added to the program in the form of an exhibition half-mile by Johnny A. Dodd of 927 Dorchester ave., Dorchester, who will show the youngsters how he won the world's championship five-mile race from Dick Philips of New York in the fast time of 14:58½ at Lincoln Rink, New Haven, Ct., 44 years ago. Although Johnny is now 80 he is still an excellent skater.

MADE FAST TIME

According to Mr. Dodd, the third mile of his championship race in New Haven was done in 2 minutes 58 seconds. So, you see, you will understand from that what sort of a treat you're going to get from Johnny's performance in the Arena.

And don't forget to start right away making those costumes in which you will appear in the big feature—the costumed parade on skates. Those prizes will be worth winning. There is an age limit. Prizes will be offered for the most attractive or unique costumes and also for the funniest.

Preliminaries of the derby will be run off in four Boston parks Saturday afternoon July 14. The parks are Chelsea Beach playground, Leverett and Cambridge sts., West End; Strandway, South Boston, near Columbia Park Beach (roped off area); Paris st. playground, East Boston, and Franklin Park Greeting from entrance to Franklin Blue Hill ave. to bird house. Winners in the park contests will fight it out the following Saturday at the Arena. Select the park nearest your home of those listed above and take part in the preliminaries there.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Prattle and Tattle!

Alexander Gray, movie and stage star, now in town, has been a secret bridegroom a fortnite . . . Not so secret, however, will be the merger of Vanda Hoff (ex-wife of Paul Whiteman) with Milton Unger on July 2nd—the marriage of the Earl of Cowley, forecast in this dept. 3 Fridays ago, to Elsie Himes, may lead to complications from Mary Alice Collins, the actress . . . She's starting suit for breach of promise . . . They were very indignant, I mean Rajah Raboid, the psychic, and his secretary, Elvira Tampa, when I announced their pianissimo, marriage and their forthcoming bassinet arrival—they even denied it—but they became three yesty . . . The man who formulated the entire Nazi platform for Hitler and is still in his pay, although he's now in Italy is Miklos Lebovics who's just admitted he's a Hungarian Jew . . .

The widow of the late Smith Reynolds — Libby Holman — has launched a campaign to crash society—she's leased the largest villa in Watch Hill, R. I., and will have Mrs. Louisa Carpenter with her as her social mentor . . . Albert Zugsmith, father of Leane, the novelist, and Al Albert, publisher of the Atlantic City tab, died Tuesday night . . . Claire Luce and Clifford Smith have definitely decided it's no go, after several attempts at reconciliation . . . Mrs. Louise Carpenter divorced the wild yarn that the Baron Maximilian Von Romberg (he's the pale playing son of Antoinette Converse of the society Converses and she was Emily F. Hall) are the composers of "Brother Can You Spare a Dime." . . .

Just for the records: Jimmy Walker's daily column is being written without assistance, the "ghosts"—it's all his own . . . The Nazis in Austria have adopted the cornflower as their national flower . . . The genial frau of Kelcey Allen, the dramatic critic, presented her husband . . . Max Steuer sails, too, now that Mitchell's been acquitted . . . Incidentally, Steuer, who turned 100 gees in advance as his fee, is telling friends he considers the banker's acquittal the greatest victory in his career because of the adverse newspaper publicity which preceded the trial . . . Mrs. Carl Akeley, wife of the famous explorer, leaves shortly for Africa to make a film of the wild life there . . . Although it was one of the town's hints, Laurence Schwab is still in the red on "Take a Chance" . . . Because a numerologist convinced him Bert Lytell is dropping the final "l" in his moniker . . . Billy the Oysterman gives us a bit of Old New York in his rambles Down Memory Lane here Monday.

Washington, June 24 (AP)—An appeal to unorganized workers of the nation "unite to obtain for the rights and benefits" of the national recovery act went forth today from President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Meantime, officials indicated that a general movement to organize in industries where the open shop or company unions prevail was already under way, and directed by the federation.

"The hour has arrived when labor can be free, free to organize," Green's open letter addressed to "wage-earners and salaried workers everywhere" said. "Congress has established your legal rights. Employers everywhere should avail themselves of the opportunity thus presented."

LIVE NEWS OF WALL STREET LEADERS

REPORT of freight car loadings for the week ended June 17, which showed the highest total for any week this year and an increase of 13.4 per cent over the like 1932 period, was pleasant reading for followers of the carrier stocks. Loadings for the week aggregated 587,933 cars, an increase of 23,345 over the preceding week and 69,533 above the last year's total.

Floor Bull Likes Southern Pacific

Impressive resistance displayed by Southern Pacific during recent reactions is understood to have attracted the attention of a leading floor bull.

June Auto Output Sets 4-Year High

Relative backwardness of motor shares the last few days in the face of competent estimates that the industry is enjoying its best June in four years suggested to some observers that the group has already discounted the current month's results. Sales of the two leading producers are setting a pace indicating that General Motors will exceed May volume by at least 15,000 cars. This would mean a total at least double June last year and the best month since 1929. Chrysler sales are reported to be at a rate exceeding all records for the period in the last seven years.

Communications Business Gains

The communications business continues to improve in many directions. The telegraph and cable business is satisfactory and both Western Union and Postal are continuing to make satisfactory profits. The same can be said for the telephone company and it is expected that forthcoming figures on station losses will prove that the curve in that case has definitely turned.

STATE ST. Hears:

That it is harder to stick to the 105-107 levels, predicted for the rally from the 91-93 area, than it was to assert the latter would be seen when prices were threatening to go through the roof early this week. So perhaps we had better forget them for the time being, at least, and once again take up a position on the sidelines. This applies to all but the fast in and out trader who is accustomed to making swift decisions and will get out before a sudden dip.

Market Action

The first thing that impresses tape watchers about current market action is the lack of snap and pep during periods of rally. The fire that was so obvious throughout April and May is no longer in evidence. The tape sets us though the majority of the buying fraternity were surfeited with bullishness.

Participation does not broaden out. As noted here at mid-week total issues traded declined. Rising actions contract on strength. This is a natural happening when the list is exhausting its rallying power. It has now been witnessed often enough to make one extremely cautious.

Boardroom Briefs

To many of the keener boardroom element it seems that electrifying news is necessary to shock the market out of its rut . . . But they will not be surprised if one group is carried to a new high closing . . . This would smack of manipulative tactics if the other does not quickly follow through.

As far as the gossip about testimony last week Friday lows goes it is nonsense. A break down that far now would undoubtedly mean a full fledged secondary reaction . . . And we can not see holdiin stocks that long, if they are still held . . . Stops under the lows of the 22d look good.

MODERATE RISE IS REGISTERED FOR LEADERS

New York, June 24—Pivotal shares moved quietly through today's trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The final half hour saw a moderate rise registered as numerous leaders, pivotal issues and others ran to fractional net gains running from fractions to better than a point.

Trading ran at the slowest pace for any recent short session, with total transactions around 1,700,000 shares.

RAIL LIENS FIRM

In the bond division price changes were irregular, with secondary rail liens firm. Curb industrials were moved upward giving the list an irregular higher appearance. New highs were set in the grain pits and cotton moved to new highs for the season. Foreign exchanges showed narrow changes.

Rails were helped on the "Big Board" by the appearance of weekly leading figures, showing further gains, and the best total for any week this year.

Moderate gains were made by American Can, U. S. Industrial alcohol, International Harvester, National Steel, General Electric, Columbian, DuPont, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Bethlehem Steel, Case, National Distillers, Chrysler, General Motors, Crown Zellerbach, Texas Gulf Sulphur, American Can, Western Union and U. S. Steel.

Several large blocks of General Motors and General Electric came out at small advances, as rather heavy tone was displayed by American Telephone, Santa Fe, American Tobacco B, Allied Chemical, Liggett & Myers and Lackawanna.

EQUIPMENTS FEATURE . . .

Railroad Equipment shares were early leaders in strength under the leadership of Pullman, reflecting the hope that the current recovery in carrier earnings would be translated into equipment purchase soon.

Gold stocks were better and textile issues continued their rise with the spectacular Celanese forging ahead into new record high territory. The American woolen issues also were up sharply.

Sugars improved with American Sugar spurting. Farm stocks again rose with grains, Kelvinator was in demand, going to a new high in active dealings on the reported spurt in its earnings.

U. S. Steel was a firm leader on the further improvement in the industry, but other pivotal issues like American Telephone, Allied Chemical, American Can and du Pont met backwash. Motors and oils were sluggish, meeting profit taking after their recent strength.

It was reported in the market that a decision would be reached shortly on the proposed steel wage increase, and that it was considerably be about 10 per cent, to become effective July 1.

It was also said that wages would be taken to increase the prices for steel. There is considerable speculation as to what the extent of the price advance will be, and in the best opinion it has been estimated that it will range from $2 to $4 a ton, according to product and grade. The higher prices anticipated is looked for in sheets, a branch where competition has been most keen and price cutting more general in the past.

Meanwhile demand for steel products has constituted on an unusually active scale, with companies in the East getting more business than was looked for. A number of mills located in the East have been increasing production at a comparatively rapid rate since the beginning of the week and promise to move still higher in the coming month as a result of the urgent requests of consumers for deliveries.

Grains Close at Highs for Season

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—Grains swept upward to the highest levels of the season again today, following crop reports from the West and Northwest, which said that crops were more severely damaged than had been believed.

All grains were affected with all deliveries of wheat well above 80 cents. Huge waves of buying were followed by large profit-taking sales, but these were without effect and the market closed very steady 20 to 50 higher.

NICHOLS COMING HOME

Former Mayor and Mrs. Malcolm E. Nichols will return to Boston next Thursday, following a two-weeks' cruise through the West Indies.

WORK FOR McGRATH

Although Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath has made no formal announcement of his candidacy for Mayor, Charlestown friends are actively campaigning in his behalf. They are already predicting that he will carry the district in the November election.

EX-NEWSY IN RACE

Another former Boston Evening American newsboy has entered the political arena. He is Captain of Irving Seigel of 78 Allen st., who today announced his candidacy for the City Council from Ward 2. Seigel is physical director at the West End House. He is a war veteran, having enlisted in 1917 at the age of 16. He got more than 800 signatures on his nomination papers.

150 American Boys Will See 'Elmer'

As a reward for service then have given their customers, more than 150 Boston American carrier boys from Dorchester, Roxbury and Jamaica Plain, will have a chance to see Joe E. Brown in his latest picture, "Elmer the Great," which opens at the Rivoli Theater, Roxbury, today.

The American carrier boys will be guests of Manager Elmer Levine at the Rivoli Monday or Tuesday. Besides Joe Brown, the boys will see the picture, "Hell Below," in which Robert Young heads a cast including Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante and Robert Young.

John Public Loves Taxes

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Government revenue from beer is even bigger than our most optimistic reformers had feared.

Add that to the tobacco revenue and you discover that what this country needs is good citizens with bad habits.

Or better citizens with worse traits.

Both these commodities are luxuries. Nobody objects to paying an added tax on beer fun. With the money pouring in it looks as if the reformers have got a terrific body blow in back of the ear.

A cigar in his mouth and a stein on his lower lip is proof that the American citizen can take it on the chin.

That's that. The surprise ending of the Mitchell case was okayed by most New Yorkers, who figured that the jury had sufficiently.
